THE AMERICAN OFFENSIVE
An excellent impression has been created abroad as well as here by the character of the fighting which has been shown by the Americans at all points along the western front.

THE GERMAN DRIVE
As the renewed fighting by the Germans continues and the allied armies are forced to retire, although exacting a tremendous toll in lives, evidence continues to accumulate to the effect that striking at the point which they did was more or less of a surprise to the allies.

Restriction is forced upon many because of the price but in this appeal Mr. Hoover asks all, regardless of position or ability to buy at any price, to help in the conservation.

The saving which has been made already by the people of this country is tremendous. That all are not doing all that might be expected is indicated by Mr. Hoover's appeal, but it is time to realize that everyone should recognize the importance of doing his part.

A STRANGE PLEA.
A Russian bolshevik newspaper says, "Let some power honestly help us combat successfully the threatening danger. Russia would appreciate in the highest degree any assistance toward the improvement of transportation and communication facilities and the cleaning of her economic life."

From the bolshevik standpoint then it is not considered that Russia's rights and needs are worth fighting for. Recognizing the future which impends under the steady extension of the German influence he is preferred to face strangulation to the rejection of aid which will not only help Russia to get back onto its feet but help Russia to ward off its great menace.

THE SUNSHINE SPREADERS

"Let's find a table for two," said Cornelia as they entered the crowded restaurant. "I've so much to tell you."

"As soon as they were seated she began to tell the most wonderful things that happened this morning. You remember my telling you about Mrs. Gordon, the woman who lives at our hotel, and how she was so kind to let us stay here?"

"Oh, yes, you do," Cornelia insisted, as Mrs. Conroy shook her head. "I told you about my getting in bad at the hotel when she insisted on my staying here. I didn't attend that party of hers, you know."

"Well, while I was dressing this morning, some one knocked at my door. To my surprise, it was Mrs. Gordon. You know, she has utterly ignored me since we had our disagreement. She seemed rather nervous, and we talked at random for a few minutes. She was uneasy, as I had eaten my breakfast, and I cordially dislike being late at the office. I could not understand her calling so early anyway, but I was getting pretty badly fussed when she said: 'Cornelia, bring me a book, won't you?'

"I must have looked surprised, for she laughed nervously and said: 'I don't blame you for being surprised, but my dear, I'm a convert. I think that a German army of half-raven food has caused an outbreak of sausage poisoning. Ermengen found whole colonies of the bacillus in a ham which was not decomposed. This bacillus is proved, is dangerous, whether admitted by way of the alimentary canal or subcutaneously. Kemper prepared a preventive antitoxin, but the grand preventive is thorough cooking of food. Germany stayed her horrible plague of typhoid when she began to cook smoked ham before eating it.'"

"Of misapprehensions, especially those of remote origin, there is no end, and in the category of that of the new Chief Secretary, Mr. Black, how either the Shortts of the Seatts came as an extra 'A' is inexplicable. Each family at least has through ignorance. Each family at least can boast of an old-time celebrity who disdained the use of the superfluous praised by Roger Bacon, and in George's case, the immortal 'St. George' made and sold to the King of Spain for £1250 the finest telescope then in the world."

A fleet of five or six wooden vessels built for the Cunard Company by the National Shipbuilding Company of Texas. The first named the War Mystery, has already been launched. The second, the War Marvel, follows in a few days. The third, the War Wonder, is the largest wooden vessel in the world, and the builders can construct one within 30 days. The War Mystery is 34 feet long, 42 feet 7 inches beam, 34 feet draught, and 28 feet 6 inches moulded depth.

Our books on naval history which give, in terms of flags, Nelson's signal at Trafalgar, will have to be brought up to date to include, in Morse dots and dashes, the signal 'St. George for England' of Zebrugge. Our Japanese Allies will be the first to note the fine watchword, for Togo, an infantry division, and a night march of 34 feet draught, and 28 feet 6 inches moulded depth.

There was a further reference at Tottenham Police Court on Saturday to the case of the great munition worker, earning well, who was given a separation from her husband. Her grievance was that he wanted more than she was giving him out of her earnings, which were being sent to him by high wages at the same factory. The husband now attended and said he had a wife who was giving him more than he was giving her, and that the trouble was caused by the woman's relatives. He wanted to know, if his wife could earn such big money, why she could not stay at home and do the housework.

Owing 30,000 acres of land in her own right, irrespective of what her marriage might have brought her, the Countess of Warwick was admitted on Saturday to the Nationalisation in London that she was heart and soul in favor of the nationalisation of the land of this country. In the eyes of her family and friends she was, so to speak, committing social and moral harakiri in belonging to the same amounts as those for her resolution favoring the public ownership of land which was carried was seconded by the countess.

"The hottest 'doings' I have ever been in" was the comment of a soldier from Le Ferre, referring to some heavy fighting. "Pointing" is a term constantly on the lips of our fighting men and is a word that probably has the record for the many meanings attached to it. Experience and the contest from the only clues to its interpretation in each case. "That's a safe containing the 'doings' conveys the information that champagne or other officially prohibited drinks can be obtained at a certain house. "The 'doings' start on the left" refers to a forthcoming attack. "Dogs and 'doings'" means eggs and fried clipped potatoes, whilst "coffee and 'doings'" means coffee and fried potatoes.

Under the new pensionary warrant, which came into operation yesterday, the allowances of children lately widows and disabled men are raised to the same amounts as those for regular soldiers' children which were given in the Monday's "Lilly Courier." They are as follows: New—First child, s. 6, d. 8; old—s. 5, d. 0. New—Second child, s. 5, d. 0; old—s. 4, d. 2. New—Third child, s. 4, d. 2; old—s. 3, d. 4. New—Others, s. 4, d. 2; old—s. 3, d. 6.

Under this revision a widow with six children will receive 48s. 4d. extra a week. Widows of soldiers who fell in former wars are to have their pensions increased to 13s. 9d. a week, including decreased advances. "The cushiest Blighty 'doings' imaginable" informs the listener that the speaker has a not painful wound that will in all probability take him to England.

After eight or nine days' visit to France, Mrs. Doolley has returned to England with a still firmer belief, if that were possible, in the victory of the Allies' cause. For the short president of the Seattle Federation of Labour, in an interview, described their journey to the American supply base and afterwards to the front lines, and to the American lines. He said the American boys were anxious to do a lot more fighting than they had been promised, and that the possibility, he stated, that there was that possibility. Asked for his general impression of the situation, Mr. Short said: "I could not leave without attracting attention. Mrs. Gordon said simply, 'And presently I wanted to hear it all. My dear, it took something like that to make me up. To think how I've been so long in the hospital, and how those dear, brave boys needed cheering! So when I heard about our liberty, and how much they really meant to me, I decided to go. I pledged myself to sell 100 smilee books. Just think of being able to help the boys in that way! I'm in love with the idea. Knowing that you were interested in this sort of thing, I thought you might be able to give me some suggestions and help me to know just where to begin.'"

MRS. DOOLEY'S ADVICE TO WORKING GIRLS

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I wish all girls who work and suffer from functional disorders would profit by my advice and take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Before I was married, when I came home from work at night, I would be just as worn out as if I had been in a night which dragged me down. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it made me feel like a new woman. I can work from morning until night and it does not bother me, and I wish all girls who suffer as I did would try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."

Working girls everywhere should profit by Mrs. Doolley's experience and instead of dragging along from day to day with a burden, give this famous rosy and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial. It has overcome just such conditions for thousands of others, and why not for you? For special advice, write Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. The result of their 40 years experience is at your service.

STORIES OF THE WAR

Sailing Ships Evah Rebuff Submarines. (Correspondence of The Associated Press) In the weekly return showing the number of British merchant vessels attacked by submarines, the phrase "British Merchant vessels unaccountably attacked." The Admiralty records show that 145 ships were lost in many a story of gallant seamanship.

During the month from March 15 to April 15 of this year, 145 British merchant vessels were attacked unsuccessfully by U-boats. The submarine which attacks a defensively armed merchant ship has no longer a "sure thing." During the past month there were several cases in which even two U-boats were unsuccessful in attacking a single steamer. There are several cases also, in which the steamer completely turned the tables on the German, and sent him to the bottom.

Even sailing-ships frequently give a good account of themselves against the submarine, although in the nature of things they are much less easy to manoeuvre than a ship with steam power. The following is one such case reported to the Admiralty: "A sailing ship, proceeding leisurely on her course when the lookout sighted a submarine on the starboard quarter. The gun crew kept firing at her until she disappeared under the water. The U-boat which had been vainly twisting and turning to get out of range, suddenly went down by the bows, and stern steel clear of the water for a few minutes. She then disappeared perpendicularly, and came up again at an angle of thirty degrees above the water. For a short space of time she remained in this position, and then disappeared like a stone."

Early one afternoon the captain of a steamer in ballast saw the track of a torpedo coming for his ship. By a quick swing he succeeded in avoiding it. Then the U-boat came out of the water and opened fire, one of his shells striking the boiler, and another the second cook's cabin. The steamer replied valiantly and the encounter continued for four hours, the steamer firing at intervals, and the U-boat keeping the submarine dead astern. A shot from the steamer struck the submarine amidships but failed to do anything but to force the German to discontinue the action. But after four hours, the steamer got the submarine into a smoke cloud, and a shell struck the boiler, and another the second cook's cabin. The steamer replied valiantly and the encounter continued for four hours, the steamer firing at intervals, and the U-boat keeping the submarine dead astern.

In another attack which was successful, the crew of the merchantman's gun were handicapped owing to the deck giving away under the gun rattle. The captain ordered the crew to jump. The man who was sighting it was injured, but the crew continued firing and eventually forced the submarine to discontinue the action. One of the first shots from the submarine broke the wireless aerials of the steamer, but the wireless operator repaired the damage under fire and sent a message through to the nearest British destroyers.

It is not exceptional for aeroplanes to continue flying when their pilots have been killed. An officer of the Royal Air Force, while on duty on an "Evening Standard" representative, "There have been cases of machines continuing until their petrol has been exhausted. One day I was on duty on a machine with their pilots dead. In a recent case just brought to me, the officer explained, a Bristol fighter (two engines) (Ford and Airt) started at 1.30 p. m. in good flying weather. At 3.50 feet the two engines, running 30 miles an hour at 1,000 feet, were suddenly cut off. The Bristol machine hung on to its quest for a few minutes, and then crashed down. Immediately our machine made a sweep south. It had lost height in the process, and was crashing down as if out of control; but it kept steady on until it was lost to view.

A little before 4 o'clock the machine fell to the ground near the town of Arros. Both its occupants were found to be dead from bullet wounds which had struck them in the back. The pilot's body was found in the wreckage. "There is no doubt that the two men were shot immediately the German machine was sighted. The Bristol machine, which was a perfectly controlled flying machine, was in the air for a few minutes before it crashed to earth."

"Then, from some reason that will never be known the controls were shifted and the machine was made. As the pilot's body was found in the wreckage, it is probable that the machine was out of control for some time before it crashed to earth."
