WHAT HAS BEEN DONE, MAY BE DONE

(Written Specially for The Bulletin.) Once on a time, the farmer folks of New England were a sturdy independent parcel of humanity.

He raised his own wheat, rye, corn, oats, barley, etc., and had them ground at his local mill, where the miller took his own ten-yard, a taking out for himself one-tenth, by measure.

Nowadays we very seldom get a quarter of our own supplies from our own farms. We sell almost everything we raise, and usually have to sell it at wholesale rates.

THE FARMER'S TALK TO FARMERS

WHAT HAS BEEN DONE, MAY BE DONE

cramped by sumptuary legislation and limited by food regulations; when we are still further being called on to produce more and consume less for the sake of the needy overseas; when the urgency of thrift is being forced home to all of us when we find we must save the dribsels and guard the cents;—why wouldn't it be simple common sense for us to turn back to the old changed conditions will permit to the thrifty practices of our ancestors and try to make our farms, if not wholly, at least much more generously self-supporting?

Nowadays we very seldom get a quarter of our own supplies from our own farms. We sell almost everything we raise, and usually have to sell it at wholesale rates.

When you see the White Sox play—then you know what blend means

Ever find yourself planted at the ball-game alongside one of those old-time rooters? You know the kind—he can tell you Pop Anson's batting average in 1879, and how many home runs Jim Delehanty whaled out one afternoon in 1887.

He remembers when some of the players wore whiskers. He remembers when Billy Sunday knew a lot more about the trail from third to home than he did about the sawdust trail.

One thing the old fan will tell you—the gang that brings home the pennant isn't the one that has all the star performers. It's the bunch that knows team play, and how to blend their efforts so they work like one machine, that gets a crack at the gate money in the big series.

Still-Blended

By the Mecca still-blending process, moist heat is passed through these twelve selected tobaccos. The full rich flavor of each is drawn out and merged into one, much as the full flavor of tea is drawn out by steeping. Only in this way can be obtained the Mecca flavor.

The word blend is the big idea

It gets the real results. THE POPULATION OF THE WORLD is 1,628,830,000. Every five months enough Mecca cigarettes are made to supply everyone on the face of the earth.

The procession moved over this announced line of march, halting at Pawcatuck bridge, where the Women's Relief Corps performed the beautiful and impressive ceremonial of strewing flowers on the waters in respect to the Civil War sailors buried at sea; through Grove avenue, High street, Broad street, West Broad street, Pawcatuck, Liberty street and St. Michael's cemetery. Thence back to Dixon square, thence to River Bend by way of Elm street. The exercises at River Bend included the services of Memorial Day according to Grand Army ritual, "Nearer My God, to Thee, and America, My Country," with benediction by Rev. W. R. Eichtman and Liba by bugles.

Notwithstanding the threatening weather during Thursday morning, the hidden sun came out in all its glory when the time came for the Memorial Day parade.
