

PITTSBURGH HOUSEWIFE

Tells How Hard Working Women May Keep Well and Strong
Pittsburgh, Pa.—I keep house for my husband and myself and I got into weak, run-down, nervous condition and no appetite. I heard how Vinol helped others and tried it and it built me up so I am strong, have a good appetite and feel better in every way.

The reason Vinol was so successful in Mrs. Croker's case is because it contains the very elements needed to build up a weakened, run-down system, make rich red blood and create strength.

SHORE LINE FERRY TO SUBMARINE BASE

May Be in Operation by Middle of the Present Month.

It will be probably the middle of the month before the ferryboat for passengers and freight to be operated by the Shore Line Electric Railway company will be running between Smith's Cove on the Quaker Hill side and the submarine base on the Groton side of the river.

There is still some more work to be done by the company that is driving the spruce piles wharf at the southern end of the trolley trestle over the cove, and there is also some work to be done by the contractor who is doing the flooring and other work. The wharf has been completed.

The boat that will be used is undergoing some alterations in New London in order to adapt her to the service, but it is hoped that the service will be ready to start by the 15th of June.

ROBT. S. ROSS IS USED TO AIR RAIDS

Writes of Bursting Shells That Fell Nearby Him in France.

Robert S. Ross, formerly U. M. C. A. secretary in this city, and now doing war work under the association auspices in France, has written the following letter to friends in Schenectady:

"We are having a very interesting time at the front. We are glad to be able to render a large service to the men and their appreciation is almost beyond expression.

"We leased an old hotel which had been closed up for years for our headquarters. It is right across from the railway station and a very convenient place for the men, who are coming and going. Great numbers of them were served with hot drinks and lunches all through the first nights of entrance and at many other times. We receive our supplies from Paris and reship them by big trucks and smaller autos from the warehouse to various points on the front. Some of the roads are closed for day travel by the military authorities as too dangerous. Some cannot be used by the big trucks, so after dark the smaller trucks run up part way. After that the men carry supplies to the very first trenches.

"There is plenty of excitement most of the time.

"The airplane battles attract considerable attention and it is great to see the work of the aviators in the air. We get so accustomed to airplanes flying overhead that often we never think of looking up.

"The enemy attempted to bombard the railway station and shot a good many shells into the town close to the station. I presume the French were correct in estimating they came from 12 to 15 miles west. We are sure that any came to me was about 100 feet, as I was turning in at the gate of our warehouse. This shot came down through the house just behind me and knocked the front of the house into the street, scattering stone and mortar and iron work and dust in every direction, as well as the shrapnel bullets that came out of the shell and its own shrapnel. Another shot struck the wall of our warehouse yard but did not reach our big trucks nor the goods. I had gone to the warehouse to get my gas mask and helmet as it seemed as though I would need them. The Frenchman advised us to go down into the cellar with an arched roof, 'cave abri' till the firing was over, so we did, and stayed in there about an hour.

"The great shells whistled loudly over the top of the house and landed at both sides of the station but did not hit the station nor damage the tracks. Some came every five minutes. About 5 o'clock all was over and everybody went out. The officials thought, however, that at midnight we might expect another attack. After talking it over at supper time, we decided to take the women workers and as many of our men as would go and spend the night in a little village a few miles distant and return in the morning. This we did as a precaution, but there was no further bombardment. There was danger that our hotel might be hit and catch fire. I had over $1000 in francs, securities, money and checks which the bank could not take on Saturday, so I had three men with me in an auto and I kept two iron boxes with me on the trip and all slept at a hotel in the little village. When I returned Sunday morning the bank opened up for us and took my deposit of all this money, and I was relieved.

"The French got busy Sunday and used their big guns and many airplanes to get back at the enemy and shut them up for a while. The booming and vibration of the firing, so regular and steady, sometimes almost without a moment's intermission, can be heard for hours many days and many nights, though not so loud where we are in headquarters but that one can sleep through much of it when well tired out.

"Coming in here Monday I was due at 5:45 o'clock, but our train was held up again and again to allow the passing of troop trains and we did not get in till 2 o'clock, Tuesday. While I was walking along the dark streets, on the way to the hotel, the anti-aircraft guns began booming and were followed at once by the loud sirens all over the town announcing an air raid. The night men in the hotel called some of the guests and dimmed the night lights. They commenced coming down to seek more safe parts of the building. I was tired enough to tumble into bed and take a chance out of many thousands that anything might come our way, and I was soon asleep and did not get up till after light.

FUNERAL.

Frank Hughes.

The funeral of Frank Hughes took place from the mortuary parlors of Cummings & Ring on Tuesday morning with relatives and friends in attendance. At the services in St. Mary's church Rev. J. H. Fitzmaurice sang the mass. Two hymns were sung at the close of the mass. Mrs. T. J. Healey presiding at the organ. Friends acted as bearers. Burial was in St. Joseph's cemetery, where a short committal service was conducted at the grave by Father Fitzmaurice.
