PUTNAM
The following letter has been received by Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Shaw of Farrow street, from their son Clarence, who is one of fifty boys who volunteered to do relief work with the American Red Cross in Germany:
"Arrived in Berlin the 15th. It was some trip, for it took us three days to get here. We left Malabar the 11th but we stayed in New York until the 12th, when we started for Berlin. We traveled pretty fast until we reached Belgium, then we went pretty slow on account of the railroads being torn up. Belgium is a very beautiful country and it reminded me of the trip we had in England. Everything was nice and green and the weather was great. Saw quite a few coal mines and several old windmills like they have in Holland. We stopped at Campiagne, Novon, Hautmar, St. Quentin and Narbonne. These are the places where the English fought. We also went through Liege; these places are destroyed somewhat, but I don't think they are as bad as northern France. Every bridge was destroyed along the route and when we arrived at Oacbin we were in Germany; this is also called Aix la Chapelle. Arrived in Berlin at 4 o'clock on the 17th. We stayed in the yards until the next day. We are staying at the Hotel Almagne. It has all the modern conveniences. I have a passport, so I am able to go anywhere in Berlin. There are many things to be here for every one stays at it. There are very few Americans here, so I guess that is one reason they look at us. We have not yet stopped at a station to have either dinner or supper we always had a bunch of them looking at us. They surely would have liked some of our bread. I hated to eat here before the war, but now it is no life in them. If you were in Paris you would never think they ever thought in this way. Everything is so full of life, but here in Berlin it is different. The only people who still like the Kaiser are the very rich people of Germany. The news in the papers here is that the Kaiser is coming to Germany with food. Don't know whether this is true or not. They asked us if we had food for them. I think I have to go to the market. Hoping this will find you well. etc.

LIBERTY HILL
The Ladies' Aid society fair and sale has been postponed until next month. Mr. and Mrs. Everett Loomis returned Wednesday after a short visit with relatives in Middletown. Mrs. E. A. Noyes and Mrs. Hattie L. Starkweather have returned to Mrs. Noyes' home for the summer. John Clarke was in Hartford Wednesday on business.

Some time during Friday night burglars entered the home of Martin Foley on Mechanic street. They gained entrance through a kitchen window. Their first business of importance seemed to have been to secure a feed. The battery was ransacked and a large part of the clothes appropriated on the spot. A large shopping bag which hung handy was filled with all the small articles about the rooms, including razors, jewelry, glassware and other small valuables. The authors believe local thieves are responsible.

Trout brooks all through the town are reported high. Dennis Barnett, an outfit took a fine half dozen fish from Willow Brook Friday. The report is that Mr. Wheeler and Mr. Barnett will enjoy a day's trout fishing the former in town. Campbell's Palmer's, Hovey's and Brown's are all top high. Ask "Denny," he knows!

Principal Edw. Snow, head of the Near-East drive for this district, stated his son, "Happy," will not proceed as near as well as was hoped. The given time for the drive was the first three days of April, but it has now been extended through the first few days of this week.

JEWETT CITY
Mrs. Attreata Gardner, 71, wife of John M. Gardner, died at her home in Griswold, Friday. She was born in Rockville, N. H. Her family name was Palmer. She is not only a member of the old line of Rhode Island Palmers, but by her marriage comes to be identified with the family of Connecticut Gardiners, who are prominent in the right sort of stock much more than back of the limits of this country. She became the wife of John M. Gardner of Hope Valley, R. I., forty-nine years ago and has since lived in Griswold. Besides her husband she is survived by one son, Frank Gardner, and by two grand children, Miss Grace and John Norron Gardner. There is also living a brother, John F. Palmer of Rockville, R. I., and two sisters, Mrs. L. F. Gardner of Middlesex, Alabama, and Mrs. Sarah E. Brown of New Haven, Conn. She leaves many nephews and nieces in cities and towns all over New England.
