SUIT OVER AWARDED TO CONSERVATOR An appeal from probate in the Stenington probate court which allowed Miss Elizabeth Colegrove, conservator of John Mason, an aged resident of Mason Island, the sum of $4,700 was tried last in the superior court here on Wednesday before Judge James H. Webb, who took the papers and reserved decision after he had heard the arguments made by Attorney G. Curtis Morgan and Abel Taylor for the appellant, Alice A. Young of Westport, and Attorney Herbert Rathbun for the conservator. Both the litigants are nieces and heirs of the old man, who was 89 when he died in November, 1912, leaving no will. Miss Alice Young received $3,700 as one of his heirs and the probate court allowed Miss Elizabeth Colegrove $4,700 for her bill of personal services and $1,125 expenses for the time she was conservator of the old man and lived in his home and took care of him from January, 1914, to the time of his death. From this allowance by the Stenington probate court, Miss Young took an appeal. It was in the testimony that the old man left an estate of $15,000 and that he was living in a miserable condition at the time of his death. When Miss Colegrove was sent for to come from a place in the west where she was living to take care of him, she found him in the color of death because of the neglected condition Mr. Mason was living in at his age, his skin over his face body to the color of wax. The first time she saw him, that the house he was living in was 200 years old and was so littered with accumulations of rubbish and cast-off articles that one could scarcely get into it, that it was full of crawling and flying insects, and that the accumulation of dust and cobwebs on the inside and outside of the window panes almost excluded the light of day. The attorney for the conservator attacked the allowance made to the conservator on the ground that it was excessive and that the Stenington probate court made up the account and likewise passed on it, thus acting as both judge and jury as to the allowance was concerned.

NOT ANXIOUS TO RUN SUNDAY MOVIES TILL FALL The moving picture theatre managers are not anxious to run pictures until along in September on Sundays, for the reason that the attendance during the summer is lighter than during cooler weather. Many people have believed that the moving picture business is a gold mine, but let the theatre managers relate some of the things they have been up against in conducting their business and it will be apparent that everyone in business nowadays has his troubles. The price of films has materially advanced, the government tax on films has gone up 500 per cent; the heat and light costs more money than it did; the help demands more wages; the musicians receive more pay, and on Sundays they demand and receive double pay. They are frequently called upon to loan their theatre for this or that benefit and are expected to do so cheerfully and without rental, and they have often done so. Daylight saving has struck the theatres as well, this may seem strange, but here is how it works out. The first evening shows usually start at 7 o'clock. It is daylight then and people do not wish to attend the pictures as a rule they think they will enjoy the picture for an hour and go to bed around 8:30 to 9:45. It is just beginning to get dark at this hour and if the start is not made for 15 or 20 minutes the show has commenced and finally patrons will decide after all to give up going because they feel that they are then too late to see the whole program. Result is that the first show finds a scant attendance because of prolonged daylight. The second show starts at 9:15 and many remain away from both. If they are going to run pictures on Sunday, they must start at 10 o'clock. The managers have got to have a good attendance to prevent their actually losing money on the proposition.

TWELVE TEACHERS SEEK RETIREMENT ALLOWANCE Applications of twelve teachers for retirement allowances aggregating $252,000 were approved Tuesday by a meeting of the teachers' retirement board at the Capitol. Four were teachers who had retired from service before June 29, 1917, and the remaining eight intend to retire at the close of the current school year. Previous to the adoption of an amendment by the recent session of the Legislature, the retirement law required that an applicant be at least 70 years old and have at least forty years of service in order to be eligible for the retirement allowance, but an amendment adopted this year reduced the age limit to 65 years and the required period of service to forty years. Including the allowance granted Tuesday, the state will be paying $260,000 annually in retirement allowances.
