SHORE LINE EMPLOYEES COME TO WORKS
Julius Faib of Bridgeport and Charles J. Hiscoc of New Haven, two of the new employes of the Shore Line Electric Railway, were arrested Tuesday evening charged with breach of the peace. The two men came to blows after a heated argument regarding the ability to do the work under the supervision of state agencies and institutions, headed by Col. Rort O. Eaton: "Dear Sir: You have submitted to me for my opinion the following question: In the new speed that prevented the laws of 1919, what institutions maintained wholly or in part by the state come within the supervision of your department and in what way do they come under your supervision?"
From an examination of the statutes the following question was stated to be included within the terms of the act: Connecticut state hospital, Norwich state hospital, Manchester training school and hospital, state farm for incurables, tuberculosis sanatoria, county homes, Connecticut Children's Aid society corporation, House of Good Shepherd, Florence Crittenden Mission and all other homes for dependent and neglected children receiving state aid; also all reformatories, institutions of the state for the insane, and all commitments makes an order for the support of a minor by a relative under the provisions of section 1874.
Under the terms of this act no duty devolves upon you in the management of these institutions or in the expending of the state funds therefor. Your duty is confined to collecting from people who are using our humane institutions under false pretenses the cost of their maintenance in these institutions, either from them directly or from their relatives made liable for the same by statute.
In the exercise of sound public policy the state maintains these institutions for the benefit of its people and in the exercise of its duty to protect and care therein, the state will no longer bear the burden of what is essentially a private collection from those financially responsible the amount of money the state has expended in their behalf under the provisions of section 1874.

NO CHANGE IN THE TROLLEY STRIKE
There was no change in the trolley strike situation on Tuesday and a settlement of the controversy seems as far away as ever. Trolleys are still being operated on the Yantic line.
Three deliberate attempts to wreck trolley cars on the Shore Line Electric Railway Co. were made Monday on Montauk avenue in New London. The first car left the parade at 5:45. A second car was wrecked at 6:15. The lower part of the city and Motor-stewart street could see only a few feet in front of him. In one way, it was fortunate that the car was so damaged for it forced the motorman to run his car slowly and cautiously, and it was not until the car had been derailed and otherwise for one of the switches had been "doctored" that a large iron pin had been hammered and wedged in the switch in such a manner that a car could not pass over it without being derailed.
When only a few feet from the switch, Motorman Stewart noticed the bulging pin over the side of the engine and on account of the slow rate of speed at which he was traveling he was able to bring his car to a stop, but only just as it was to take it he required the combined efforts of the motorman and conductor Budger to remove the iron pin. It was brought to the office of Trainmaster Smith.
Heavy Iron Placed on Track.
The second attempt came shortly after the first was made, a short distance south of the Montauk avenue bridge over the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad tracks. A large iron switch support, weighing 18 pounds, about a foot long, and tapering at one end, had been placed on the rails lengthwise. An account of the fog, neither Motorman Stanton nor Conductor Malona, who was driving, saw him in the vestibule of the car, were able to distinguish the obstruction until they were nearly upon it. The brakes were applied and the car was reversed, but efforts to stop the car were futile and the front wheels slid up onto the iron, but the speed was not fast enough to throw the car from the rails.
Bolt Placed on Track.
The third attempt occurred soon after, and only a few feet south of where the second had been made. An iron bolt an inch in diameter and about 7 inches long had been laid across the track, and although the trolley car did not see it, the bolt was not large enough to throw the car from the rails.

Every wise housekeeper should take a few minutes to check up her canning list to determine how many quarts of greens, fruits and vegetables she has stored away for next winter's use. The list of products that are most plentiful and vegetables she should preserve. The green canning season is past. The pea crop is practically harvested. String beans have been plentiful and there is still a limited supply of both the string and wax varieties for those who have not secured full quota.
Tomatoes and corn, which are perhaps the most useful vegetables for winter use, are plentiful. If they may be served, promise to become plentiful as the season advances. Tomatoes are cheaper than ever. If favorable weather either product will mature with a rush so that housewives should make preparations for the winter now.

TO STOP IMPOSITIONS ON STATE INSTITUTIONS

ALKALI IN SHampoos
Bad for Washing Hair
Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious to the scalp and makes the hair brittle. The best thing to use is Mulifield coconut oil shampoo, for this is pure and entirely greaseless. It is very cheap and beats anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.
Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy, and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.
