BOGUS HENRY BROMLEY

GAVE FAMILY A SCARE The New London correspondent of the Norwich Hour sends his paper the following story about Sam Reddy, whose escapades in Danbury are the double of Henry Bromley, of Bethel, a soldier killed in France, having a wide interest and who claimed to be a native of Norwich:

Sam Reddy, who is attracting much notice at present by his dual impersonation, is well known in this town and especially with the police. Sam's escapades are many and he has run up against the local courts more than once. His home in East Woods is just over the state line and he has taken advantage of this geographical marking several times in eluding the law. Only recently Reddy started his home-tender folks up in East Woods by being reported dead—killed by a trolley car in Westport. Sam left his father's house some time ago and at intervals paid them unexpected midnight visits. About five weeks ago he made a sudden visit at his brother's home in the northern part of the town, while all the Reddy family were peacefully slumbering. He had with him a Ford auto, much in need of repairs. Sam, ever ready, heard a calf blat down in the barnyard and he drove the auto up to the barn door and pushed the car aboard. He and his friend Myra started to make a quick departure but the gas or engine kicked up a fuss when they had gone a short distance which led to their capture.

The noise of the engine starting awakened Sam's brother, and being somewhat suspicious that the noise was made by a horse, he went to the premises. Wheel trucks led to the barn and, sure enough, Sam's brother was right in the nick of time. He saw Sam's brother and the family horse Sam's brother started after the mysterious auto. About a mile down the road from the Reddy house Sam and his broken-down auto were overtaken. A heated "word" battle was waged between the Reddy brothers, and the result was said to be taken back home. It was about a week after this incident that the Reddy family got a hurried telephone message from Westport stating that Sam Reddy had been hit by a trolley car and killed.

The message said that the funeral would be held from the Methodist church in Westport that Thursday morning. On said Thursday morning the Reddy family had several in number leave the family home to go to Westport. The funeral party were in deep mourning and went bitterly over their sorrow. With a feeling that the work they had done was before the service they went around to the house where Sam had been with the full expectation of seeing him alive. To their utter amazement he was not there. They were told that he should step out on the porch but Sam, what in his absence had done over here, said Sam, was not to your father's grave. It is such incidents as this that have kept Sam in hot water most of his life. Just for getting caught by his own family, he was fined a family. Sam plotted a scheme whereby he caused his father, mother, sisters and brothers much sorrow and made them wear mourning, all to go to a live man's funeral.

CALL TO MOBILIZE EPISCOPAL FORCES

The most dangerous kind that the nation is facing. The dinner was served at 8 o'clock in the big dining room of the hotel. Bishop Acheson and Rev. Dr. Milton occupied seats at the head table with Archdeacon J. Eldred Brown and Rev. R. H. Graham, president of the clerical union, was the toastmaster.

In introducing Dr. Milton, Rev. Mr. Graham spoke of the responsibility that the representatives of the churches had in carrying back to their parishes the inspiration and information which they would gain at this meeting. The nation-wide campaign has a mission to bring to the churches the broad national spirit, working in churches if they will be willing to work and sacrifice for the mission to which they are called.

In the opening words of his stirring address of one hour, Rev. Dr. Milton referred to some of the lessons of the recent war, which he said had proved that the nation at heart was sound, and was a nation of idealists. He had shown that the whole nation had laid its offering willingly on the altar of patriotism and humanity. Or, and all we consecrated ourselves to the common purpose, men, women and children, willingly giving of themselves that they might do their bit.

Two processes had gone along side by side, a new spirit of nationalism with a broadening of the national consciousness into a world consciousness, and the democratization process, all becoming true and loyal in the service of the common cause. With a magnificent example, no man can slip back into the old easy complacent service. Those under the banner of Jesus Christ will not be content with the old way but will demand a program big enough and large enough and wide enough to call for all they have or can hope to be.

It is the time for the mobilization of the resources of the rank and file to work out the problems which this church has set itself to solve in the name of God and the name of common humanity. Is this the church of the day? Is this the church of the living God ready to seize upon the powers at our hand if we will but make use of them?

A brief address followed some questions after Dr. Milton had concluded his address and at the close of the dinner votes of thanks, which were offered by Archdeacon Brown, were given to Mrs. G. Osgood and Mrs. L. Osgood for the floral decorations of the tables, to the two speakers of the evening, and to Miss Mary Richards and the Misses Osgood for arranging the table decorations.

BISHOP E. CAMPION ACHESON

Rev. Dr. William H. Milton of Wilmington, N. C., representing the central office of the Episcopal church in the nation-wide campaign of the denomination, gave an inspiring address Thursday evening at the nation-wide campaign dinner held at the Wauregan house for 100 representatives of the churches of the New London archdiocese. The dinner was held under the auspices of the Clericus.

In a word Dr. Milton summed up the nation-wide campaign by saying that the campaign date of Dec. 7 and nothing but starts everything mobilizing all the resources, personal and material, to use them for a mighty attack upon the problems of the day to save civilization from destruction or to bring about a new order of things.

Bishop E. Campion Acheson of Middletown, followed Dr. Milton with brief but impressive words upon the call to every individual and to every parish for consecrated service that cannot be discharged all in a day or a month but has got to be carried on beyond that. The nation-wide campaign is just what it calls itself, he said, and he exhorted the men and women of the church to get the great field vision, and make the church a counter force against the powers of sedition, rebellion and propaganda of

STATE COMMERCE CHAMBER FAVORS DAYLIGHT SAVING

Re-enactment of a national daylight saving law was favored by the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce in a resolution which, among others, was adopted Thursday afternoon at the closing session of the annual convention at New Haven. The body also took issue on record in favor of its own inquiry, through committees of the state legislature, of the transportation problems for a plan to promote increased business for Connecticut manufacturers, for enforcement of laws to maintain peace, order and public safety, and to look into the feasibility of the secretary of the interior for a survey of the power resources of the country.

In resolutions also the chamber demanded that laws be enforced to the extent of the power resources of the country, and to look into the feasibility of the secretary of the interior for a survey of the power resources of the country.

DEFERRED CREDITS ARE NEEDS OF OUR ALLIES

Belgium, France, Great Britain and Italy are not financially bankrupt, as the impression has gone out, but are in need of money to purchase immediately necessary raw materials five hundred business men of Connecticut were told by the international trade commission at a banquet given by the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce at its annual meeting in New Haven Thursday night. That America will extend it to them, the speakers declared they felt confident after their trip around the circuit. Their confidence was echoed by Willis H. Booth, president of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, who has directed the tour.

The delegates were welcomed by Gov. Marcus H. Holcomb, who, after a brief review of Connecticut's important work in the war, told the delegates that had Connecticut had the say, America would have been in the war on the very day the Lusitania was sunk.

Belgium was spoken for by Mr. Florimond Hanker, director of the National Bank of Belgium. For France, Mr. Eugene Schneider, inventor of the "T" gun and the "Red Star" had a misunderstanding as to the labor strike in the allied countries of Europe. Strikes have been attempted, he said, but in every case the solid thinking people have stood firmly until today social and labor conditions are almost as stable as before the war.

Sir Arthur Shipley Penn of London, after expressing the feeling of friendship existing between America and Great Britain, introduced J. C. Jenkins of Australia to speak for his mission. For Italy, Guido Molino, head of the great engineering industries of that country, was the speaker.

Col. M. Ullman, president of the New Haven Chamber of Commerce, was toastmaster. The meeting of the newly elected board of directors of the Connecticut chamber, scheduled for today, was postponed to meet at the call of the present officers within a month.

DAVIS THEATRE La La Lucille.

"Far below average" was the consensus of opinion expressed on the part of the large audience that witnessed the musical comedy, La La Lucille, at the Davis theatre Thursday evening. The production could hardly be placed in the two dollar class. The chorus, for small points of numbers, was decidedly weak. In fact there were but few good voices in the entire cast.

However, it must be said that the plot was good and there were a number of witty lines. Two specialties that drew applause were the toe dancing by Rene Mackensie (Mile, Victrola) and the musical number, It's Great to be in Love by Lila Tarzan and Nell Erwin. The specialty dancing by Victorine, who was down on the programs three times but who appeared only twice, was very favorably received while the musical number above mentioned was the only one that drew forth insistent applause.

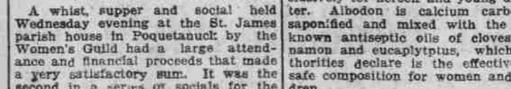

With reference to the cast it may be said that Julia Clifford as Lucille Jans and Miss Lila Tarzan, who carried the role of Mrs. Britton Hughes were popular with the audience. The comedy was well taken care of by Marion Langston and the janitress while Robert J. Livingstone was in the role of Oyama, a ferocious Japanese butler. The role of John Smith, Lucille's husband, was well carried by Neil Pratt.

Mother! Be Watchful of a Growing Baby's Teeth

However neglectful you may have been of your own teeth, you owe it to your children to see that they take care of theirs. When epidemics like influenza and spinal meningitis come, children who have clean mouths are most likely to escape.

BERATES POLITICIANS FOR TRYING TO RUIN TREATY

Hartford, Nov. 20.—"The only way in which the American people can show themselves willing to help the destitute people of the east is to prove that they are totally out of sympathy with the politicians trying to ruin the treaty," said Henry Morgenthau, late ambassador to Turkey, in his address to more than 200 women from all over the state at a luncheon this afternoon at the Hartford club as the inaugural event of the fall and winter campaign of the American committee for relief in the Near East. Mr. Morgenthau spoke particularly of the needs of Armenia.

"The people of eastern Europe," he said, "are relapsing into a condition of primitive poverty. America has no conception of the destitution of the peoples of the East. One layer of wealth after another has been torn from them. All the wealth and tradition they had inherited has been snatched from them. They are left in shreds. Their power to earn is gone. Their capacity of enjoyment is gone. They are wretched beyond conception."

Mr. Morgenthau in concluding said: "The only way the people of the United States can refuse the deserved criticism they will receive if they refuse to ratify the treaty is to prove themselves completely out of sympathy with their politicians by sending aid to these poverty stricken people of the east."
