

WESTERLY

The superior court last Tuesday severed the bond that held the Narragansett Pier railroad, by the Rhode Island company, and the railroad is up against an uncertain future, after midnight of Sunday when the railroad is returned from federal to private control.

The government is throwing the rock back on us destitute. I don't know even whether we will have coal enough to run a single trip when Monday comes. We've had a requisition on for coal for some time with the railroad administration, but haven't been able to get any action.

We can't tell yet whether or not we will have to cut off the Pier special to and from Providence. That has got to be taken up with the New Haven road.

The only thing that is certain is that we can't run the road the way the government has been running it. It has been losing about $2000 a month under the railroad administration's management.
