WESTERLY

There will probably be a special town election to elect a member of the town council to succeed the late Charles G. Craig, who was elected last November, the term being for two years. Prior to that town councilmen were elected for one year, and there have been terms when there have been vacancies, practically for the full term. Several years ago D. Harold Rogers was elected a member of the council but could not qualify. He had failed to register, was not qualified to vote at the election where he was a candidate and therefore not qualified to serve as councilman. During that year the council consisted of six members. In the world war, while Frank Larkin was an ensign in the navy. He was a member of the council, he served as a substitute for the full term. He had knowledge that he could not serve, and again, the town affairs were managed by six councilmen, instead of the regular seven.

With the terms of office changed from one to two years, conditions are also changed and it is not believed the council will continue without its full membership. Therefore it is expected a call will soon be issued for a special election to choose a successor to the late Councilman Craig.

STONINGTON

There will be a borough meeting, March 18, to levy the annual borough tax and to take action upon a petition of The Atwood Machine company, which sets forth that the company is owner of certain real estate in the borough the first parcel known as the Gates dock on the west side of Water street and that said property has an alleged public way or traveled way at one time known as the "Town Landing" which traveled way extends from Water street to Stonington harbor; that the land lying on each side of said traveled way, and so-called public landing is owned by the petitioner.

Second: That petitioner owns other real estate in that locality known as the "Morsecroft dock property" over which real estate it is alleged that a travel way or open way leads from Water street on the east to the waters of Stonington harbor on the west; that petitioner owns the property on the north and south of said alleged passage; said alleged passage way or traveled way is about 20 feet wide.

Third: Petitioner further represents that said open ways are no longer required as a public convenience or necessity; that the purposes for which they were laid out and established no longer exist, and that the discontinuance of said open ways by your Honorable Warden and Board of Burgesses would prove a mutual benefit to the borough and your petitioner, and petitioner agrees to care for, improve and enlarge the same toward the harbor to protect the rights, sewerage and surface water and extend the same. Whereupon the petitioner prays that the warden and board of burgesses take such action as by vote or otherwise will determine said two open ways in such manner as they may deem proper.

JEWETT CITY

It is a matter of conjecture how many Griswold residents would know of this ancient burying ground until they read this story from Mr. Phillips' book:

Spy Rock Cemetery.—About a mile northeast of the Pachaug river, at Jewett City, and near the residence of Elmer C. Starkweather, the hill known as Spy Rock rises from the river plain to a height of 250 feet above the level of the sea. Its steep and rugged sides, well covered with trees and bushes, makes the ascent difficult, but when the crest is once attained a delightful view spreads out to the south and east.

As one turns from the landscape to the opposite direction, if he is keen-eyed, he will discover in the thicket, a few feet away, a few stone slabs standing as if set up by the hand of man; a closer inspection discloses an ancient burying ground of a forgotten people. Thirty graves can still be made out; the stones which mark them are for the most part without inscriptions; and only one, that which bears the name of Winter Green, is easily decipherable at present.

Some years ago careful examination disclosed five stones with inscriptions, the oldest of which bears the date 1734.

A comparison of ancient records with these inscriptions shows that this was the burial place of the descendants of the oldest of which bears the date 1734.

Nettets and Greens who early inhabited the farm of which Spy Rock was then a part. And that that martyr soldier of the Revolution, Caleb Green, whose name is inscribed on the bronze tablet of the monument in front of the Pachaug church, was the son of Winter Green, who is buried here. Upon the ancient stone appear these words:

In memory of Mr. Winter Green, who died Nov. 27th, 1809, in the 78th year of his age.

HELD THIS (TUESDAY) EVENING

A Jewett City resident had a phone. The note was heard and recognized although, did not see the bird's records, that these birds have arrived in the woods as early as the middle of March. Some birds have been heard of the phoebe, early birds think it might possibly be a white throated sparrow. They were here until the middle of May on their way north to their breeding grounds in Canada.

As a result of Saturday evening blizzard many of the back roads are blocked again with snow. A foot of six-foot drifts, all to the north and east not a few little snow-crooks must be left to the effect of a "remover," a rising temperature.

On the afternoon of March 24, a fine bouquet of trailing arbutus was picked on Read's hillside, where for years the sweet arbutus grew in profusion. Last year the snow was unusually willows March 14.

In this section it is a well known fact that from the many governments free garden and lower woods were few were chosen to plant. The theory has been exploded locally many times that they are "no good." Many small gardens have got their crop from congested seeds. On the other hand only last summer, which might be said to stand indicative of other summers, dozens of papers were not taken by those to whom they were repeatedly offered free.

One man who has made it a business to plant a few of these seeds every year and report on the result has this to say: One year three different trials of standard parsley seeds were planted, all failed to germinate. Last year a dose of satisfaction. Late in June, as a last resort the free seeds were planted, the result was noted as the best crop ever. They were the hollow crown variety.

HEBRON
The school nurse, Miss Colby, of Hartford was in Hebron and Columbia last week, returning to Hartford Friday afternoon.

The storm of Saturday morning was the worst of the season. Nearly all business excepting that of the shoemaker seemed to be at a standstill.

Miss Florence Smith was home from New Haven for the week-end, returning Sunday night.

There was no service in either church Sunday morning. On account of the bad traveling the pastor of the Congregational church, Rev. Howard Champe, of Hartford, was unable to reach here as there were no trains through after the early morning hours of Saturday.

For the first time in ten years the teams from the Gilead Creamery were unable to make Amston with the milk, Saturday morning, the teams becoming stalled in the drifts.
