At a union meeting of the Norwich Congregational Home Missionary societies held in Park Church Parish house, Friday afternoon, a most interesting talk on the work being done among the mountain people at Pleasant Hill, Tennessee, was given by Mrs. F. W. Wilcox of New York.

The meeting was opened with a short devotional service led by Mrs. George D. Colt, president of Park Church society, after which Mrs. Wilcox occupied the remainder of the afternoon, bringing to her audience in a pleasantly informal way many of the perplexities as well as the encouragements which confront the teachers of such mountain schools.

The American Missionary association has never faced a more difficult problem than the present one of securing teachers, but a better day is coming, so far as salaries are concerned for an appropriation of $100,000 has been made for increased pay. This money will materially benefit about 600 teachers, who have been existing on very inadequate salaries.

In the large southern cities, like those of the north, all children are able to get the benefits of good schools and colleges, but shut in by the mountains, far away from the best paths of civilization are these submerged groups, still living the ways of their ancestors, called "Mountain Whites." These are the boys and girls who come to the school at Pleasant Hill, eager for an education.

Sergeant York came from this neighborhood and two of his relatives are now attending the Pleasant Hill school. His is the fine type of young men which is being helped by these home missionary influences.

The Pleasant Hill school is fortunate in its principal, who exerts a splendid influence over the young men. On his family home, "Missionary Billy," the principal's wife, who is also a doctor, goes in and out the mountain homes, up and down the roads which even a Ford car cannot find, teaching hygiene, the care of the sick, and bringing up of babies, proper feeding and many nice ways of living to which the mountaineers are absolute strangers.

It is hoped to put up a dispensary and eventually build a sanatorium for treating pellagra and tubercular patients.

Children who come to the school go home with the sanitary suggestions of combs and tooth brushes, and their example does a good deal by way of teaching their parents.

Moon-shining is an ever present evil, no theory, but an actual fact, and the kind of man who runs an illicit still is ever on the alert to attract the boys of the school to get them under the influence of whiskey.

The teacher of a mountain school has that evil to fight, also the matter of morals, just now in present to the girls the sanctity of marriage and of motherhood is another grave responsibility, which calls for delicate tact.

Mrs. Wilcox impressed her hearers with the great good that the local Congregational churches are doing in supporting a teacher at this school. It is an inspiration to our special teachers to know that we stand behind her, ready to assist in any way possible.

And through her, we are reaching many boys and girls, who will indelibly carry on the message as they go out into the world, to give of the service they have learned. If we could only visualize this service, we are helping in the mountains, we would realize how worth while it is.

We are only doing, for these submerged, isolated people, just the things we do for our various charities at home, for folks are folks the world over.

Walker and Charles Marsh were first prize winners. The consolation awards went to Miss Rose Matassa and Hiram H. Farnham. At the close, Mrs. Smith presided by Miss Nellie Donohue, served sandwiches, cake and coffee.

Hiram H. Farnham, who expect to leave town soon were decorated with gifts. In behalf of the club, Miss Alice M. Smith presented a hot-water bottle to Mrs. Farnham, and a box of cigars to Mr. Farnham. In recognition of the twentieth wedding anniversary of Mrs. Charles Marsh, another member, Mrs. Frank E. Steery in behalf of the club, presented Mrs. Marsh twenty pieces of coin and two hot water bottles, of large and small size.

Friday, the teachers of the West Town street school, sent a circular letter to the pupils' parents, asking them to remove all possible aid in keeping the children out of the road, in going to school. The letter also urgently requested them to instruct their children to walk on the sidewalk, or if there be none, to walk on the extreme side of the road. This is in recognition of a safety precaution for some time past the teachers have feared a possible accident, owing to the fact that automobiles were going in the wrong direction, making much headway just at this time, many having none too careful drivers.

REORGANIZES HOLY NAME AT JUBILEE MISSION

The closing of the evening's mission with the special paper blessing will take place in the afternoon. The closing service of the men's mission takes place in the evening.

WESLEYAN STUDENTS TO AID COLLEGE ENDOWMENT PLAN (Special to The Bulletin.) Middletown, Conn., March 13.—Four hundred and fifty Wesleyan undergraduates, the entire college body, are saving, or planning to save, a certain percentage of their allowances each month, and many of the fellows are calling upon the Y. M. C. A. employment bureau during the recess in order to secure the success of the drive for $35,000, the undergraduates' fund campaign, which Wesleyan is conducting.

Simultaneously with the launching of the intensive drive among the Alumni, all over the country, the announcement was made that the undergraduates were to be called upon for $35,000, a committee of 15 undergraduates was appointed today to direct the drive among the various fraternities and independent groups.

Plans for the campaign will be outlined in full at a meeting of the general committee Monday night. The final rally of the campaign will take place in Memorial chapel, Thursday evening at a big mass meeting of the entire college body.

No pressure will be brought to bear on a student, but it is believed that all can pledge at least a small amount to be paid in five yearly installments, and many of the students can give larger amounts. In the endowment campaign of eight years ago, with about half the present number of students, the undergraduates contributed $12,000.

WITHDRAWN PETITION ON NORWICH-WESTERLY TROLLEY Resident of North Stonington are trying to save trolley service for their section by finding some way in which the Norwich and Westery line may be continued.

At their request Receiver Robert W. Perkins of the Shore Line system withdrew the application which was dated for a hearing Friday morning in New London before the superior court in which the receiver is asking authority to discontinue the Norwich and Westery line except for the section from Norwich to Hallowell.

The North Stonington residents have engaged Attorney Frank L. McGuire as counsel and he had a conference with Receiver Perkins and Judge John P. Kellogg as a result of which Mr. Perkins agreed to withdraw the application.

It is understood that the North Stonington people have no definite plan but want time to see if they cannot evolve some solution of the problem.
