Both Sides Claimed Points in Preliminary Skirmishes—Suffragists Plan to Delay Final Vote Until Next Week—Opponents Are Pressing for Decisive Action Friday—Impending Demonstrations Have Been Planned by Both Factions—Today a Joint Session Will Hear Delegations of Organizations Supporting and Fighting the Amendment.

Dover, Del., March 24.—Frieds and foes of woman suffrage both claimed points in today's preliminary skirmishes in the legislature to make Delaware the thirty-sixth state needed for ratification of the equal suffrage constitutional amendment. Introduction today of ratification resolutions in both senate and house opened the actual struggle. Plans to delay a final vote until next week were made by the suffragists, while the opponents pressed for decisive action on Friday. Both sides continued confident of the outcome and veteran suffragist supporters of the amendment, including Senator Walker, republican, who has experienced in any other state. Conceding that present sufficient votes were lacking in both bodies of the legislature to carry the suffrage constitutional amendment, the suffragists claimed several advantages in today's proceedings.
