

WESTERLY

Westerly workers are interested in the statement issued by President George R. H. Hames and Field Representative Earl H. Upham of the Master Builders' Association of Rhode Island.

"Building construction in Providence, new about at a standstill, will be entirely held up within a few days unless the laborers and hod carriers now on strike accept the terms of the contractors and resume work at once. Many jobs are ready for work, but all are being held up pending the action of the laborers and hod carriers," said Mr. Hames.

The strikers in Westerly have offered to compromise with the contractors and return to work on a 75 cent an hour basis, this offer to hold good until Monday. If not accepted, it is claimed the demand for 75 cents an hour will be withdrawn and a new demand for 80

EXPORT FROM EUROPE SHOW BIG GAINS

What are the articles forming the enormous increase in Europe's exports to the United States? Luxuries from her treasury-houses and raw material from her colonies. The total value of Europe's exports to this country had advanced, says a statement by The National City Bank of New York, from $590,000,000 in the year prior to the war to $318,000,000 in the year in which the war ended, a drop of practically two-thirds in total value, despite the fact that prices of the articles forming that trade had at least doubled meantime. Yet the indications today are that the total value of merchandise sent from Europe to the United States in the fiscal year which ends next month will be three times as much as in the immediately preceding fiscal year and actually preceding occurs chiefly in luxuries, but includes also certain products of the European colonies now reaching us by way of the mother country, instead of direct during the war. Among the luxuries in which the great increase occurs are diamonds, art works, lace and embroideries, silk, high priced furs, and goods, kid gloves, and olive oil, while the colonial products now reaching us by way of Europe include India-rubber, jute, wool, furs, hides and skins, and raw cotton.

In many instances the increase, especially on the luxury side of the statement, is very large. Diamonds, for example, in the preceding year, practically all of them from Europe, amounted to $48,100,000 in value against $3,300,000 in the same month of the preceding year; works, brought chiefly from Europe, $21,715,000 against $2,850,000 in the same months of the preceding year; silk lace and embroideries in the current year $1,312,000 against $1,182,000; walrus ivory from France and Italy, $1,010,000 against $233,000 in the same months of the preceding year; silk fabrics $1,110,000 against $261,000; silk wearing apparel $2,050,000 against $692,000; and raw silk, chiefly from Italy, $2,007,000 against $38,000 in the same months of the preceding year. One class of articles which falls outside the luxury list is burials, brought from the United Kingdom in the same months of the preceding year, valued at $2,330,000 against $1,550,000 in the same months of last year.

Just what proportion the colonies supply of the enormous value of the hides and skins, which Europe is now sending us, cannot, says the bank's statement, be specifically determined at this moment, but it is a fact that the value of the hides and skins sent us from Europe in the eight months ending with February 1920, probably largely colonial, is $23,000,000 against a little over $1,000,000 in the same months of the preceding year. Of the $23,000,000 worth of India-rubber which Europe sent us in the eight months of this year as against $522,000, all of course is produced outside of Europe, and chiefly in the colonies of Great Britain, the Netherlands, Belgium, France and Italy. Of the $14,247,000 worth of pig tin sent us from Europe against $4,239,000, practically all was produced in the Malayian Peninsula, and the Dutch East Indies, but sent to us from their "mother countries" in Europe, Great Britain and Netherlands, respectively. Of the $31,960,000 worth of sugar sent us from Europe this year against $15,000,000 worth last year, presumably a very considerable proportion originated in the colonies.

Other items of merchandise sent from Europe in much larger values this year than last include leather $12,970,000 against $500,000 last year; woollen manufactures $11,862,000 against $2,900,000; raw cotton, chiefly Egyptian and chiefly sent from the United Kingdom, $14,692,000 against nothing in the same months of last year.

The Birch Trees.

They stand in the woods alone, often in groups like a smuggling party of debutantes, waiting the coming of admirals. The light that falls upon them accentuates their slim beauty and their girliness. By the side of lonely lakes and rivers with the wind blowing upon them they have a grace of beautiful dance. In still hours they look down on calm waters and, reflected in the mirror thereof, seem like slender marble columns in a garden of beautiful dances. ### Hampton Roads.

The Roman face of vital importance in our war operations, but unmentioned in that connection because of voluntary press censorship, again is a center of interest because of the burning of the Hotel Chamberlain. A bulletin from the National Geographic Society gives the history of this region as follows:

"There are but one entrance by sea into this country, and that is at the mouth of a very goodly bay, Captain John Smith wrote in his 'Map of Virginia with a Description of the Country' concerning Chesapeake bay with its attendant harbor, Hampton Roads, which he describes as 'bounded on the north by the mountains of New France, and whose western limits are unknown.'

"A few bustling ports like New York and Boston might disagree with the redoubtable captain concerning the facilities their harbors now offer, but certainly no harbor can claim a much more romantic history not only in Colonial times, but in the world war as well.

"Hampton Roads has been the rendezvous of the conqueror ever since there was one. When, during the early part of 1917, newspaper reports were sent from France and Italy, followed up somewhere in the middle of the Atlantic, it had secretly slid out of the harbor of Hampton Roads and was quietly at work in a few miles from the bay awaiting orders from Washington. At a moment's notice boldly above the mean dwellings of the modern town. Nowhere does such massive permanence suggest such every lightness as in these six abiding pillars of the temple of the sun.

"The smaller temple, itself larger than the Parthenon, was erected to Bacchus, a jovial god, now discredited in certain parts. It is one of the finest Roman temples extant. The entrance to this temple to the God of Wine is decorated with delicate carving that would grace Melrose Abbey or worthily frame the Rose Window of Rheims.

"The forty-three-foot doorway is surrounded with tracery where vines and garlands, nymphs and satyrs and gay bacchantes are transfixed in stone, almost as they appeared two thousand years ago when the ringing chisels of the Roman sculptors fell silent before its finished perfection.

"Basileus bespeaks permanence in spite of the crowd of ephemeral summer visitors who seek in the cool shade of the willows beside the sacred pool a rest from the heat of the Mediterranean littoral.

"The emblem chosen for the Lebanon on flag is the cedar tree. This symmetrical symbol of lasting strength has long served as the seal of the American university at Beirut. But the cedars of Lebanon are not unappreciated by the people of the mountains. They call them 'The Cedars of the Lord.'

"Some scholars believe that the picturesque sides of lofty Lebanon were once clothed in the majestic trees and give as a reason the fact that Solomon obtained from Hiram of Tyre great rafts of this time-defying timber for the famous temple at Jerusalem. Others cite this as a reason for believing that never have there been many of these kingly trees and that their rarity as much as their rot-resisting qualities made them desirable to a king who could scour the known world for the best temple material.

"However that may be, the main group of true cedars now contains only about four hundred of these trees, clumped in what from a distance of several miles appears to be a dark green haecck thrown against the snow-capped mountains. Yet these trees, four hundred of which look like a single tree shrub if one sees them from the Kadisha valley or the distant mountain peaks, are really eighty to a hundred years of age. Only the cedars of the Himalayas and the Sequoias of California surpass them in age and dignity.

"The Lebanon had its own government with a Christian mutesarrif and 1861, following the Druze-Maronite disorders of the year before. But in 1815 all special privileges were abolished by the Porte. The Lebanon gendarmerie wore a picturesque uniform in the Zouave style with voluminous trousers of dark blue piped with red and with tight jackets and trim leggings.

"The grapes and cigarette tobacco of the Lebanon have long been famous. But possibly this lone mountain range, which has given its name to the political region has never done a greater service to mankind than when it drove the Phoenician traders to the western sea and gave sea-borne commerce and, perhaps, the alphabet to the world."
