TALKS TO ARGENTINES ABOUT MEXICO
Hon. Luther K. Zabriskie of this city, came to Argentines, Mexico, to give a series of lectures on Mexico. He spent a few weeks at his home here, gave an interesting talk on Mexico after the supper at the Arcanum club on Friday evening. He generally referred to the course of his talk, said that during the three years in Mexico he had received only courteous treatment from the Mexicans, and that the most interesting thing he had learned was that Mexico had nothing but good to say of the people. He said in part:
"With the possible exception of Russia, the country just south of the United States comprises within its territorial limits the greatest variety of altitudes and climates, land configurations and soil products, together with the corresponding variations among the inhabitants of the country and the general conditions under which they live. It is a country of extremes. The snow-capped peaks of the highest mountains are the 'Greenland's Ice Mountains' of Mexico, while 'Egypt's Coral Strands' can be found all along the Pacific coast and the shores of the Gulf of Mexico. The broad central plateau is well-irrigated and of rugged vegetation but is immensely rich in minerals. The most important product that has ever been found; and the coastal plains present such sights as are only to be witnessed in the tropics. Mexico City, which is generally referred to as 'The City of Palaces,' is occasionally likened to Paris on account of the magnificence of its public and private buildings and the elegance of its society leaders. The subject of Mexico, its history, its land and its peoples, affords a study that is intensely interesting, and it is upon many a subject that he is inclined to feel that the half has yet to be told."
The history of the country is full of romance, adventure and largely legendary. It was supposed that when the Spaniards came to Mexico in the sixteenth century they discovered the cream of the country. It is true they took vast wealth from the mines but those same mines have been almost entirely exhausted and there are unlimited natural resources yet undeveloped. Agriculture, however, is the leading occupation of the country and Americans have sunk fortunes in it and mining while others have reaped wealth.
Travelers to the United States are poorly impressed with the country when they enter the country from the north by the El Paso route and it is not until within 100 miles of Mexico City that they become impressed with the beauty of the country. But those who go by the way of Vera Cruz have one of the most beautiful scenic journeys that could be desired, mountains, rivers and valleys present a picturesqueness that can only be equaled by a trip through the Alps. The cactus, which is found in Mexico in practically every known species, is meat and drink to the natives and enters into the making of cloth and other household necessities. From the cactus comes that milky-looking, ill-smelling beverage known as pulque. It is used, if not advisedly, for it is said of pulque that, like Limberger cheese, it is all right after you get it by your nose.

Five, of any country, is made from another form of cactus and it has been said that this is so powerful that a mouse after drinking it will go and fight a bear.
Mexico City is claimed to have been founded in 1325 by the Aztecs and the history is of a legendary nature until the sixteenth century. One of the first great engineering tasks was started, the building of a canal to drain off the water from the city, and was not completed until the present century. The city is very beautiful, a long boulevard running from the center to the foot hills, the beautiful trees and residences and the business section contains ancient and modern architecture.
Agriculture is like most of the other Mexican cities with houses of one story, mostly of adobe construction built around squares. Mexico is an agricultural country and some manufacturing is done.
For all the good times and pleasant experiences there is no place like none.
Mr. Zabriskie was given a rising vote of appreciation at the conclusion of his talk.
Following the address, President Alexander Jordan awarded the prizes for the bowling tournament that recently closed. The prizes were given to the Roy Robbins team; prize for high three strings went to Louis Maples; high single to John Tracy and individual average to E. J. G. G.
Charles L. Tracy was chairman of the committee on arrangements.

PARISHIONERS' RECEPTION TO REV. F. J. CUNY
The Waterbury American of Thursday said:
In St. Cecilia's hall last evening a reception was tendered the recently appointed pastor, Rev. F. J. Cuny, who came here from Norwich. It was a complete surprise to the pastor, and several gifts were presented him, including a silver set and a handsome leather rocker. The party was arranged by a committee of the parishioners and was attended by a large majority of the members of the parish. Quirin Straub presided and made the presentation of the gifts. The former pastor, Rev. Thomas H. Mulcahy, now pastor of the church of St. Peter and Paul, Rev. Father John Walsh of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes and Rev. Father Cuny made addresses. After the presentation exercises a general good time was enjoyed with music and dancing; refreshments were served.
Resignations at Groton Iron Works.
Twelve foremen and about 40 employes of the hull department at the Groton Iron works gave their resignations to Capt. A. M. Main Thursday afternoon and Mr. Main notified Plant Manager Frederick P. Hall of their action. The resignations were accepted.

Leo Carillo in "Lombard, Ltd."
Davis theatre had a capacity house Friday night for the three act comedy, "Lombard, Ltd.," which attracted New York by storm and which Oliver Morosco sent here with Leo Carillo in the title role, with Grace Valentine and the original cast. The play was a winner with the Norwich audience. The first act was the last of the clever lines written by Frolick and Fannie Hatton and so given interpreted by the thoroughly clever Leo Carillo. The second act, the curtain was kept bobbing up and down in response to repeated calls for the troupe. The Davis theatre management can feel that it had added one more to the big successes of the local stage.
Right alongside of the work of the stars, Carillo and Miss Valentine, was the meritorious work of the entire cast, which included Beatrice, Edna, Rickaby, Anne Hamilton, Winifred Bryson, Ada Harbour, Ethel Wilson, Ina Rozie, Daisy Rudi and Hallan Bosworth. Charles Wellesly, Warner Baxter and Harold Russell.
Graduated at Hartford as Nurse.

OBITUARY
Mrs. Mary Ann Geer.
In the passing of Mrs. Mary Ann Geer, in Norwich, May 19, her surviving and sorrowing friends feel that one of earth's sweetest spirits has returned to God Who gave it.
It is not often that one in advancing years is so tenderly ministered to by devoted relatives and held in loving esteem by so large a circle of friends. But Mrs. Geer was worthy of all the love that she inspired. Friendly in nature, unselfish in spirit, her life was marked by deeds of kindness and love, the followed very closely the footsteps of Him Who came "not to be ministered unto but to minister."
Mrs. Geer was endowed a nature with a winning personality, an active temperament, a great desire to be useful to others, and the circumstances of her early life gave her the best possible training. Bereft in infancy of her mother, she received the tender care of her grandparents; her young life was the joy of the household.
Under the wise and judicious guidance of her grandmother she grew to womanhood taking her full share in the activities and hospitalities of an ideal New England home. Her marriage in youth with a young man of fine character and great promise was all that need be desired. Their prospects seemed assured for a happy and useful life, but less than two years the shadow fell over the happy home. After a brief illness the husband was taken and Mrs. Geer, a widow, was left to rear her children in the home of her grandparents. Though saddened in spirit, she was not crushed by the heavy blow; but bore her loss bravely, took up the duties of the home, ministered tenderly to the grandparents and in loving service to others found so much for her own heart.
It was not strange that one who was so strong and calm and brave in meeting the trials of life should be a comfort to others in their grief. She was in hours of anxiety or sorrow. Though young in years she was well poised in mind, wise in counsel, mature in judgment, and in her bearing a womanly understanding. Through all her life she was the confidant of burdened hearts, the refuge of sorrowing souls. After an hour in her calm, serene, sustaining presence it was easier to bear the burdens of life.
In the household of the large family for which she was always a welcome guest, and in days of trial and affliction truly ministering angel. She has been with relatives in days of sorrow, but sympathy never failing, her love supporting them in the darkest hours.
She was a cheerful person and a true home-maker. She had a fine, homely touch, was hospitable and carried with her a delightful atmosphere. She had a great deal of family feeling, living in the lives of her kindred, an honored guest in their homes, always kindly, generous, thoughtful, a favorite with young and old. She had a remarkable memory, and her retrospect was delightful. She took a great interest in a large number of people, and was unending in expressions of kindly feeling. So the years passed on and this loving, gentle, kindly woman, filled out her appointed time. Her death was a gentle strength failed a little, but the graces of the spirit shown with undimmed lustre. The evening shadows lengthened and after noon her gentle spirit took its flight with prayer on her lips to the Heavenly Father and a fond farewell to the loved ones who ministered so tenderly to her to the end.
Mrs. Ebenezer Miner.
Mrs. Jane E. Miner, widow of Ebenezer Miner, died early Friday morning at the home of Mrs. Grace Hammond, No. 135 Vauxhall street, New London, following an illness of one month's duration.
Mrs. Miner was the daughter of Rev. H. S. and Mary Gorton Smith. Although a native of Groton, and an annual summer resident there, she has lived the greater part of her life in Hartford.
Mrs. Rogers, wife of ex-Mayor Ernest E. Rogers, and Miss Elizabeth Gorton, a sister of Mrs. Rogers, are cousins of Mrs. Miner.
A. E. Guild.
Albert E. Guild of Hampton died on Thursday at his brother's home in New London after a lingering illness with cancer.
Mr. Guild was born in Hampton 64 years ago, the son of Morris and Lucy Anne Safford Guild. He was a resident of Hampton, he has lived for the past year in Central Village. Besides Charles E. of New London, he is survived by three other brothers, John Guild of New Brunswick, Sidney Guild of Auburnville, Mass., and George Guild of Danielson; also two sisters, Mrs. Henry Harwood of Los Angeles, Cal., and Mrs. Jennie Smith of Hampton. He also leaves several nephews and nieces.
