133 BROOK BIRDS AT GARDNER LAKE

The eight miles separating Gardner Lake from Norwich mean little this season to the one hundred and thirty-three boys of the Brooklyn, N. Y., Y. M. C. A., enjoying life at Camp Massapequa, on the lake shores as they make the run in a speedy motor-bus.

Camp opened July 1 and continues to Sept. 2, a full nine weeks and all the season the capacity complement of boys has been maintained. The twenty-third year of the camp. The boys range in age from 11 to 19.

This season there has been the unblemished record of no accidents, no injuries, no games and tests for which thirty handsome trophies have been offered. The camp director is E. P. Roberts. The camp physician is Dr. J. H. Woodruff.

The campers put in a busy, pleasurable and profitable day. The camp physician, Dr. J. H. Woodruff, of the University of Pennsylvania, has been in charge of the patients to tend to the sick bay among the browned, husky, hearty youths for whose welfare he is responsible.

The campers are quartered in seventeen tents. They have taken hikes to Niantic and other points and have similar pleasures scheduled for the remaining weeks of their stay.

From 6:45 a. m. until 8:30 p. m., the campers put in a busy, pleasurable and profitable day. The camp physician, Dr. J. H. Woodruff, of the University of Pennsylvania, has been in charge of the patients to tend to the sick bay among the browned, husky, hearty youths for whose welfare he is responsible.
