BRAIN FAG AND POOR EYES

Many men and women wonder why they quickly tire at work, while other people enjoy the vigor of early morning all day.

Eyestrains, poor eyes, is the answer. Faulty eyesight unbalances the nervous system. Physical and mental fatigue quickly result.

Yet seven out of every ten people in this country are unnecessarily subjecting themselves to the ill effects of bad eyesight, when good glasses accurately fitted would give immediate relief.

WOULD SLASH COSTS OF MEN'S CLOTHING

Howard Figg, special assistant to the United States attorney general has advised all fair price commissioners to start a campaign with the thought to make men buy separately of clothing and only as necessary, with a view to forcing manufacturers to a realization that men will not pay unreasonably high prices for their clothing. His announcement from Mr. Figg is as follows: "The campaign for economy and sane buying conducted by the women's division through the four national American club women has resulted in turning the trend of prices of women's wearing apparel in the direction of reasonable levels. Manufacturers and dealers in women's wear realize the power of control wielded by the women and the situation in women's wear is favorable. "But in regard to the situation in men's wearing apparel conditions are not satisfactory. Manufacturers of men's wear are conducting a campaign of propaganda seemingly designed to hold up high prices and even to further increase prices if possible. Apparently the so-called manufacturers' guarantee against decline and the closing down of some factories are part and parcel of this well laid plan. "The department of justice had hoped that men's clothing and jobbers' wear would follow the lead of the women's wear in the direction of sane buying. It is hoped that the best interests of our country require economy."

refuse left where the tree fell some of these trees cut are chestnuts and others are oaks. On the northwest slope of the watershed a short distance from the road can be seen a place where trees have been cut out and trimmed but the refuse left lying about the ground. Going from this place to a second site of the mill, which was located on city property just below the reservoir dam, one is impressed by the amount of refuse that is left on the site. As can be seen in one of the accompanying cuts there is a pile of slabs about 65 to 70 feet long and eight feet high on the average. As is not shown in the picture, there is a large pile of slabs in back and a true idea of the largeness of the pile of sawdust cannot be gleaned from the cut for it extends down a slope for some distance. This pile of slabs would not only contain chestnut slabs but a very large amount of oak slabs is to be found. Near this pile of lumber a short distance to the right is a corduroy road over which the timber was hauled. This road is made of chestnut and oak slabs, the roadbed being approximately two feet deep and nearly two hundred feet long. Over the slabs is spread a large quantity of sawdust, all going to show that a large amount of timber had been cut. According to the contract which the water commissioners produced at the request of the common council, Mr. Murphy was given the right to cut the chestnut trees at Fairview reservoir and all the trees of every kind at Bog Meadow, but there is no mention in the contract of cutting any trees at Stony Brook. On this site as can be seen by the photograph taken at this point are large piles of lumber slabs and sawdust, showing that a large amount of timber has been sawed up. The chestnut planks seen in the picture measure about 13 inches wide and 3 inches thick. There was one large timber measuring 14 by 14 inches and about ten feet long. The pile of lumber at the left of the picture is a pile of posts measuring 2x3 inches at one end and 6x6 inches at the other end. In another pile of planks, not shown in the photograph, were several three-inch oak planks about eight feet in length. Another thing that was noticed was the remains of the toilets over which has been sprinkled some lime to kill the odor and to render the place more sanitary. At the site of the mill one can count over 15 blighted chestnut trees still standing within a short distance of the mill. They were not cut although other trees in the immediate vicinity were cut down. Leaving the mill site and taking the road to the reservoir one sees where trees have been cut down and the tops and

NEW HAVEN RAILROAD MAKING BETTER SHOWING

Bankers and brokers who gave expression to their views as to the report that the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company might soon go upon a dividend paying basis were unanimous that a prudent policy required that the road should devote any spare money which it might possibly develop to the improvement of its rolling stock and its general equipment. A broker who stipulated that his house should not be connected with any such course of investment, he argued that the road had for years been under a heavy handicap and that money should be applied to repairs and replacements and that the stockholders would be far better served in the long run were these to have priority over payment of dividends. His view is substantially that of all the men of finance talked with.
