

WESTERLY

Edward Scott, 14, son of William Scott, of Pawcatuck was seriously injured by being struck by an automobile when at Westport at 5:30 Friday afternoon. The boy had been riding on a motor truck and when Westport was reached he got off the truck intending to go swimming. He stepped from the rear of the truck directly in front of a touring car coming in the opposite direction. He was hit with such force by the right hand side lamp of the touring car, also of the motor truck, that the lamp was smashed and the mudguard bent. The boy was taken to the office of Dr. Hibbs and with the aid of Dr. Scanlon temporary treatment was given him. Later he was taken to the Rhode Island hospital in the ambulance of the Westerly Sanitary corps.

The Scott boy sustained a comminuted fracture of the right leg, a fracture of both bones of the left leg, a cut six inches long on the left forearm, a cut in the face and a severe cut in the head. It is believed the boy's hand is injured internally also.

The touring car bore Massachusetts registry number 161,241, and was operated by Prescott Chace of New Bedford. A younger sister of the Scott boy was run over by an automobile about six weeks ago but was not seriously injured.

The continued complaint of John

Maxson, charged by William Luth, deputy commissioner of inland fisheries, with having shot lobsters in his possession, was disposed of at Friday's session of the Third district court in Westerly. Judge Oliver H. Williams presiding. One week ago by reason of the absence of the complaining officer, the case was continued and Mr. Maxson released on his own recognizance. Mr. Luth was not in court Friday, but Mr. Maxson told the court that he had been summoned to appear before the board of inland fisheries commission at the same time he was ordered to appear in court. He decided to report in court and had so notified the commissioner.

The reading of the complaint against Maxson was waived. He declared that he was not guilty, but that he would plead guilty, as he could not afford to lose so much time in court attendance. He said he was $5 out by being in court on Friday of last week, and that he would lose from $8 to $10 by being at the present session. Judge Williams advised him not to plead guilty unless he considered himself guilty. Should he insist on the plea of guilty the case would be dismissed forthwith and if the plea of not guilty was entered he could have further continuance by furnishing bond for his appearance.

Mr. Kenyon confessed he had shot lobsters in his possession, but he did not know it until the deputy commissioner came alongside and found them in the bottom of his boat. He was engaged in hauling his lobster pots, and placed the large lobsters in his boat and three that he knew to be undersized overboard. Had he stopped to measure the smaller lobsters he would have drifted quite a distance and would have difficulty coming back against a strong head tide.

When the deputy commissioner came alongside and asked to see his lobsters, he emptied them from the container into the cockpit of the commissioner's boat. It was then discovered that three short lobsters had crowded beneath the container. He did not know they were in the boat, and when he had the time to make measurements he surely would have thrown the shorts overboard. He declared he was not a dealer in short lobsters. He saw the commissioner's boat when it was a mile distant, saw the commissioner overhauling lobstermen and if he had knowledge at that time that he had shot lobsters, he would surely have thrown them overboard before the commissioner came alongside his boat.

Judge Williams declared that under the reading of the statute, the accused was guilty of having three short lobsters in his possession, therefore the court would accept the plea of guilty. The penalty as prescribed by law was a fine of $5 for each lobster. He therefore imposed a fine of $15 and costs. "All right, judge," said Mr. Kenyon "Where do I pay?" He was directed to the clerk's desk.

Mrs. William B. Main had a short automobile ride, Thursday afternoon that would have fitted in nicely as a thrilling feature of a sensational moving picture. She was operating her Ford on the Westerly-Stonington road and, when abreast of the little store in Westport a sudden gust of wind loosened her hat. In endeavoring to catch her hat, she let go of the steering wheel. In an instant the automobile whirled about and the tire of one of the front wheels was ripped off. The automobile sped on, jumped over the rails of the trolley track which are a height above the traveled surface of the highway, went down a steep embankment, struck a boat that was hauled ashore and came to a standstill on the edge of Westport cove.

The forward end of the automobile was damaged. Mrs. Main was uninjured.

Judge Williams held juvenile session of the Third district court Friday, immediately after adjournment of the regular court. Two boys were committed to the state reform school. They had not beyond parental control and were connected with many minor offenses. They also have run away from their homes and given their parents and others considerable trouble. Of late they have been drawing other young boys into their bad ways and numerous complaints have been made to the police. One was taken into custody at Watch Hill and the other as he came from a moving picture show. They were committed until they reach their majority, but are subjected to the usual release, all dependent upon their future action and reformation.

What to Use and Avoid On Faces that Perspire

Skin, to be healthy, must breathe. It also must perspire—must expel, through the pores, its share of the body's waste material. Certain creams and powders clog the pores, interfering both with elimination and breathing, especially during the heated period. If more women understood this, there would be fewer self-satisfied complexions. If they would use ordinary mercolized wax instead of cosmetics they would have healthy complexions. This remarkable substance actually absorbs a bad skin also unclogging the pores. Result: The fresher, younger under-skin is permitted to breathe and to show itself. The exquisite new complexion gradually peeps out, one free from any appearance of artificiality. Obtain an ounce of mercolized wax from your druggist and try it. Apply nightly like cold cream for a week or two, washing it off mornings.

To remove wrinkles, here's a marvelously effective treatment, which also acts naturally and harmlessly: Dissolve an ounce of mercolized wax in a half pint witch hazel and use as a wash lotion.

The Sunday game at Bradford will be with Shannock. White Rock will play Stonington at White Rock Sunday.
