DANIELSON

Harry E. Danby, of East Killingly, who is both a state and federal game warden, is bound to bring in his bag of violators of the game laws. That Warden Danby is on his job is attested by the fact that he has been spending whole mornings the week of Oct. 12, well as tramping them by day. His night vigil has been rewarded by the arrest and punishment of George E. Andrews of Southbridge. Andrews was apprehended hunting coon in the town of Woodstock, was arrested and in a justice's court in that town paid a fine and costs amounting to $14.75. Clifford H. Andrus, also of Southbridge, was arrested by Warden Danby and paid costs of court amounting to $12.36 for hunting on Sunday. Marcus Klebert of this city was arrested by the warden for hunting without a license. Klebert paid court costs, but no fine, his assessment being $16.18. Warden Danby says that it is his purpose to keep constant watch for violators of the game laws, and all of Windham county as well as adjacent territory in Rhode Island and Massachusetts will be under his careful watchfulness. Following services at All Saints' church in Norwich, Rev. J. J. McCarthy was celebrant of the high mass of requiem, the body of Maxime Godreau, formerly of this city, who was brought here Friday for burial in Holy Cross cemetery. They bearers were O. C. Robitaille, J. Frechette, Moses St. Denis, Bernard Chabot and the Rev. Frederick Champagne. I. E. Kennedy was the funeral director. Leon N. Morin, 45, resident at what is known as the Charles James place on North street, died at his home Thursday night. Mr. Morin, a native of Canada, has been engaged here as a teamster. He leaves his wife and several children. Funeral services for Mrs. Alfred Poter were conducted at the undertaking rooms of J. E. Kennedy, 111 Main street, on Friday afternoon. Burial was in the Hill cemetery in the Cheshire district of the town of Norwich. There is no meeting of selectmen and other town officials to make voters today (Saturday) as many believe. The next and last sitting for the making of voters before the election is scheduled for Tuesday of next week, Oct. 19. It was announced Friday afternoon by Robert W. Boyd, of Quonset, that R. M. Berry, pastor of the Methodist church, is coming here next Tuesday evening to meet a group of men who are interested in promoting the Boy Scout movement in the town of Killingly. The meeting is to be held at the rooms of the Bohemian club. Mr. Boyd said that he is arranging to have representatives of the different villages of the town present at the meeting, the outcome of which is expected to be the making of a list of all parts of the town. It is felt that great results can be obtained in Killingly if the proper methods of approach are employed. Personal of the members in which the large number of women voters in Killingly have affiliated themselves, particularly giving great joy to the republicans and small consolation to the democrats. Of the Killingly women who have placed their names on the caucus list of either party, upwards of 100 were sent, are registered as republicans. This is taken by republican leaders as indicating that the republican strength in Killingly is greater than ever. It is felt that the effect of this strength will be felt in the balloting, two weeks from Tuesday. A number for the young people was served Friday evening at the Congregational church. Following the supper there was a social program providing many features that proved of interest. Fuel doesn't cost so much after all, only knows where to look for it. A Danvers man who owns a quantity of very good was offering it Friday morning for one dollar a cord. This is a real low price. It should be mentioned in the interest of the over-excitable, however, that this price is for wood on the lot. Handling costs must be paid by the purchaser. The new trolley fare, in effect Friday, did not seem to affect the riding on the local line, one way or the other. As a matter of fact, travel at present is much lighter than it was during the summer on all transportation lines in this vicinity. The disposition of the case of Charles Danvers in the superior court at Putnam on Friday is of much legal interest in view of the fact that Danvers first fell into the hands of the law in this place just over a quarter of a century ago, and his trial at that time in the Worcester county superior court on a charge of horse stealing is still fresh in the minds of Danvers people. Gilman's return to this section a few years ago has been a peaceful citizen and a well outward appearance went, and his present difficulties came as a surprise to a great many people. A big band of rosters is expected to follow the Connecticut Mills team to North Grovesdale on Sunday when the team is scheduled to meet Tom McDermott's Braves in what likely will be an exceptionally fast game of baseball. Each team has won a game and the

In the superior court here Friday, Charles Danvers, of the town of Plainfield, was sentenced to the state prison for a term of not less than two nor more than three years in the state prison at Waterbury. Danvers had been charged with the theft of a calf, having returned a verdict of guilty. The state prison sentence came as a surprise to many in the court room, but the evidence during the trial was such that no reasonable doubt was left of the prisoner's guilt and his previous record as a transgressor of the law undoubtedly had its bearing as to the sentence imposed on Friday. Testimony introduced by the state during the course of the trial showed that, about 28 years ago, Danvers, then a resident of Danvers, was arrested for horse stealing, was later tried in Massachusetts, was found guilty and sentenced to a long term in prison in that state. On another occasion he was convicted of stealing grain and received a jail sentence. The sentence was pronounced Judge Greene inquired, following the announcement of the jury's verdict, whether the counsel in the case desired to make any further argument. Attorney Charles L. Torrey, counsel for Danvers, addressed the court to say that he thought it only fair to state that his client had persistently, both before and during the course of the trial, denied the theft of the calf. Whatever opinion I might hold as to this, the attorney continued, I could not force a different statement nor vary the circumstances in which the case has been presented here. Judge Greene expressed the opinion that Attorney Torrey had been very faithful to his client during the course of the trial, but said in view of the evidence that there could be no doubt of the prisoner's guilt, and he then pronounced sentence. It was charged against Danvers that he was employed as a clerk on a tin tract that was engaged on the line between Putnam and actions west of here. Miss Morris was a night telegraph operator at the Abington station of the N. Y. and H. R. R. and it was while she was on duty there, along about midnight, that the assault was committed. In the struggle that she made to beat off her attacker Miss Morris was considerably bruised and her clothing was torn. Lieut. Moffitt, an army aviator, and his assistant, James O. Bourke, flew away from the Fayette L. Wright farm in Pomfret just after 9 o'clock Friday morning en route for Framingham, Mass. The aviator and his passenger had spent the night at the Wright farm, where they were obliged to make an unexpected landing. Thursday afternoon while on a flight from the army flying station at Minnola to the Massachusetts town. Examination of the plane's gasoline supply showed that the machine, which was safely landed in the town of Pomfret, was in full repair. The plane is said to be the first that ever landed in the town of Pomfret. St. Clair Carson, past grand seigneur, New Haven, H. I. Lee, grand seigneur, New Haven; J. M. Phillips, grand seigneur, Wallingford, were guests here on Thursday evening of Wappaquisset, a tribe of Red Men of this city. The visiting officials were escorted from the Putnam inn to the local hall in Pomfret street by the local members of the order, who were in full regalia. Following the business meeting there were speeches and refreshments were served. State Officer Howard Elliott was at Thompson Friday afternoon to investigate as to the killing of a dog owned by John Sirrine of this town. The animal is supposed to have been suffering from rabies. For some time past the dog has been ill. On Thursday Mr. Sirrine, who has kept the dog confined, took it out for a short walk. While thus engaged Mr. Sirrine was snapped at by the animal, the dog's teeth slashing through his sleeve. He was not bitten, however. Attention of hunters was attracted along with the condition of the dog, which was snapping at things, and a charge from a shotgun was used to end its life. Though no advance public notice was given of his coming, there was a gallery of members of the Putnam Country club at the home of his parents Friday afternoon. The house was filled with friends and relatives; the boy's schoolmates, and the local troop of scouts, of which he was a member assembled on the lawn. After a short service by Rev. G. C. S. McKay, the body was taken to the Grove Street cemetery, escorted by the High School students and the Boy Scouts. There were beautiful floral pieces. The bereaved were Leroy Ames, Morton Argen, Henry Hawkins, Broome, Effie Dean and Alfred Barber. The services at the grave were conducted by Rev. G. C. S. McKay, and as the casket was lowered into the earth was accompanied by Sidney Hayward, of the Boy Scouts. The body of Anselm Mayotte, who died in France, is expected to arrive in this country within a few days. Father Mayotte was the first priest to arrive in this state to offer his services to his country, and the

on or about July 16 of 1919, he took and carried away a calf from the premises of Edward R. Ames at Central Village. The calf, which was identified by a number of persons familiar with it, was later located by Mr. Ames at the Danvers farm, on the South Killingly-Moosup road, and reprieved by Mr. Ames. The jury was out just on hour. Danvers was transferred from court to Brooklyn jail during Friday afternoon and will be taken to state prison in the future. He is the owner of two or three farms, about two miles south of South Killingly, just over the line in the town of Plainfield.

What looked like another sure trial of a criminal case Friday was averted when Frank Morris, charged with assaulting Miss Bertha Norris, pleaded guilty to the serious accusation against him and was sentenced to serve not less than two nor more than three years in the state prison. Morris, during the spring of this year, was employed as a clerk on a tin tract that was engaged on the line between Putnam and actions west of here. Miss Morris was a night telegraph operator at the Abington station of the N. Y. and H. R. R. and it was while she was on duty there, along about midnight, that the assault was committed. In the struggle that she made to beat off her attacker Miss Norris was considerably bruised and her clothing was torn.

be in charge of the devotional service at one of the sessions of the 39th annual conference of the Baptist Ministers of Connecticut at the First Baptist church in Waterbury Monday next. Not in years has the superior court room in this city been so crowded as at this week's sessions. While there was much interest in the cases disposed of, the large attendance was chiefly due to the fact that so many are out of work at the present time and find the court room a place of interest. Extra seats were placed to take care of the large attendance.

A specimen of the biggest game that hunters may stalk in this section of the country must be loose somewhere in this section of eastern Connecticut. This refers to a "whiskey truck," for which Prohibition enforcement officers have been on the lookout for the past two days and which was expected to pass through this city. Miss Ada Alexander, formerly of this city, has returned here and is now the bookkeeper at the Day Kimball hospital.

Over 1,000 voters, many of them women, turned out to express their wishes relative to the proposed reorganization of the city. The vote was taken at the fire department at Friday's special meeting, and the plan to appropriate $9,500 was turned down by a vote of 614 to 385. Special opposition to the appropriation came from residents of the northern part of the city. It was said, by persons in close touch with the situation, and in the vote is reflected much of the reorganization of the fire department in the early part of this year. One man who is usually well informed on fire department affairs said that at any time that the ill-feeling caused by the reorganization of the fire department is still in the minds of the people, it is not fair to deal with it in the reorganization, sufficient to secure an appropriation for the truck will be forthcoming. That there is something substantial behind this statement is indicated by the fact that a large number of voters at Friday's city meeting and the result of the vote.

first to go overseas. He died of pneumonia in France, after an accident when he was thrown from a horse. He was formerly curate of St. Mary's church in Putnam and the local post of the American Legion was named in his honor. Plans are under way to have services held in Putnam, where he will be buried. Father Charles P. Bedard, pastor of St. Mary's church, will be present at the meeting of Anselm Mayotte next Tuesday evening next in the Arcaeus club rooms and exercises will be planned in honor of the brave chaplain whose patriotism is recognized by his comrades in arms, his church and city.

While God calls us through all the work He gives us to do, two special calls at this crisis of our nation and our church were especially emphasized. James 1:25, is the topic for prayer at home altars on Wednesday evening, Oct. 20. The Bulletin despatch omitted when the item of Miss Edwards' nomination was mentioned, and as a result of the omission she was not present at the assembly, that Canterbury also is in line to return a woman to the house at her polling place in the state election. Mr. and Mrs. Mann Page have returned to New York after a brief visit with their children. Mr. Walworth of New York was with them. He is the illustrator for a magazine and the "Mr. Bennett" stories written by Louis Forester and came here to get the real settings for his work. He returned to New York with the Pages after visiting the town hall, churches and Brookside. Mrs. Will Davies' infected foot is recovering as fast as possible, though she is still confined to her bed. Mrs. Edwin Edwards, who was indisposed Sunday, is able to be about again. The caucus Monday evening was attended by a large number of women as well as men. The many candidates negotiated many ballots and the assembling was long. The men—with two ex-captions—paid deference to the women by refraining from smoking. Mrs. A. T. MacLeod is confined to the house by illness. The social for the Westminster teachers was a happy affair, with three teachers present. Some mystery features added to the fun. Refreshments were served.

It proved to be the hum of the machinery filling the two big silos at Woodland stock farm. Arthur Lathrop of Hartford is home for a few days. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Randall, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Chase and daughter were callers at Fairview farm, Post Hill, Columbia, Sunday. A number from this place attended Stafford fair Wednesday. The last call for making voters will be Tuesday, Oct. 19th. Oct. 17th, Columbus day, a large touring car filled with people from Hartford was at Maple Hill farm, visiting the old landmark, the five-mile rock marked L.
