POETRY

FROM "THE VISION OF HIS LAMB"

Down sweet the still wind from the mountain peak, From the snow five thousand summers old.

On open wold and hill-top bleak It had gathered all the cold, And when it blew it was the wanderer's cheek.

It carried a shiver everywhere From the unsheltered eaves and pastures here; The little hawk heard it and built a roof 'neath which he could house him, water-proof.

All night the white star frost gleamed He cringed his arches and matched his beams; Slender and clear were his crystal spars As the lambs of light that rim the stars;

He sculptured every summer delight In his halls and chambers out of night; Sometimes his tinkling water slip Down through a frost-leaved forest-dry, Long, sparkling aisles of steel-stemmed trees.

Bending, counterfeit a breeze; Sometimes the roof no framework knew But slivery masses that downward grew; Sometimes the sun was bright and clear With quaint arabesques of ice-fern leaf; Sometimes it was simply smooth and clear For the sun's light was never absent.

Through, and here He caught the nodding larkspur tops And saw the daisy with its diamond drops That crystallized the beams of moon and sun And made a star of every one.

His mortal beauty was a shadow left; Could match this winter palace of ice; 'Twas as if every image that mirrored lay In his dream, serene, through the summer day.

Each feeling shadow of earth and sky, Lest the light should be a shadow left; Had been mimicked in fairy masonry By elfin builders of the frost.

FAIRY GOLD

In the lore that is known to our childhood, The beautiful story is told That under the rainbow's bow The fairies have hidden their gold.

Forever eluding, but tempting, The sunbeams of bright and clear rain, And over the hills and valleys We follow the glory—in vain.

Though we stand where we thought it had rested, Yet distant it ever appears; For what seems the rainbow to others, To those at its foot may be tears.

The greatest charm is upon it, This treasure, which never is gained; And bright, with a glory celestial, Is the goal that is never attained.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

The coal deposit at Lawrence, Saskatchewan, Canada, is believed to be one of the best of its kind in the world, and one of the greatest assets of the province, according to the investigations who recently made an examination of the position. Chubbuck are so extraordinarily sensitive that they measure the heat of a candle in the focus of the great Mt. Wilson reflector at a distance of sixty-two and seven-tenths miles. In his experiments Dr. Chubbuck found that the pole star radiates just about enough heat to raise the temperature of a gram of water 1 degree centigrade in a million years.
