NORWICH TOWN

Rev. Giles F. Goodenough, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church, and Rev. Charles F. Bailey, pastor of the Norwich Congregational church, exchanged pulpits Sunday morning. At the latter church the scripture lesson was the fifth chapter of the book of Genesis. Mr. Goodenough spoke interestingly from Hebrews 11:6. Without faith it is impossible to please Him, for he that cometh to Him must believe that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him. Special reference was made to the last two verses.

The social was given by the Family was the topic of the Men's Forum, which centered at noon in the school, with the visiting clergymen as leaders.

Rev. Mr. Bailey was accompanied by his wife and daughter, Miss Louise D. Bailey.

The Christian Endeavor society held a missionary social in the chapel Friday evening. People from all parts of the world were represented by members of the society in costumes. A missionary play entitled "Waiting for the Doctor" was given. This showed the need of doctors in the interior of China, Japan and Turkey.

Sanctification.—At several of the largest manufacturing concerns notices were posted stating that today (Monday) the concerns would go on daylight saving time.

JOSEPH W. CARTER, VETERAN MARINE ENGINEER, DIES AT THE AGE OF 90

Joseph W. Carter, one of the best known of the old time marine engineers and the oldest resident of the Laurel Hill section of the city, died at his home at 84 Laurel Hill avenue on Saturday evening, May 22, at the age of 90. Mr. Carter was born on Cliff street, this city, on Feb. 19, 1831, the son of Samuel and Louisa Eames Carter. His early life was spent in this city where he attended the public schools. At the age of 14 he went out steamboating which became his life work until his retirement in 1905. On April 1, 1851, he started his career as an engineer on the old steamer Worcester and after two years spent on this boat he gave up the sea for a short time and entered the employ of Craunton and Bates in this city where he learned the trade of machinist.

After leaving the machinist's trade he shipped aboard the steamer "De Witt" and went to California, making the trip by the way of the strait of Magellan and the west coast of South America. He was engineer on one of the Sacramento river gold boats and later purchased an ox-cart and made trips from "Espana" to San Francisco during the gold rush. He joined the now famous "Forty-Niners" and spent three years in the gold fields. POETRY

THE CARELESS SMOKE

(Apologies to Kipling.)
A fool there was and his pipe he lit
Even as you and I, and he was hit
On a forest trail where the leaves were lit
To become ash and the smallest bit
Of sparks and the forest was furnished it
The day was windy and dry.

The forest was burned to its very roots
Even beneath the ground.
With the fowls, the birds and the pool
Old heavy oaks, and the tender shoots
Which might have made logs but for such gales.

Allowed to wander round.
The lumberjack has now passed on.
His naysay comes no more.
And the forest-ward man woke the camp at dawn
Where the cook's tin pan woke the men Stirring.

But the mill is silent, the trees are gone.
The soil and the forest floor.

A deadly night has come to the hills of rocks
Which once were beds of green.
No more the forest, no more the hills
The woods must be held by extensive locks
And the labor is stilled to the docks.
The ships no more are seen.

But the fool smokes on in the forest still,
Leaves campfires burning, too.
While the forest-ward man has the hill
And the nation's wealth is destroyed for all.

If the law doesn't get him, Old Satan will
When his smoking days are through.
—Harrie A. Reynolds, in The Open Field.

AN INTIMATE OF NIGHT

I am an intimate of night,
I know its pulse, its glances,
Its stary portals of light—
Orion and the Pleiades.

I share the watches of the moon,
I know the secrets of the wind that crows
Down purple shades of the air.

The lunar moth with emerald wings—
I know its pulse, its glances,
Its stary portals of light—
Orion and the Pleiades.

The lone night thrush's ranting,
And all the passion of its soul.

The gleaming glow-worm in the grass
Withouts its crystal self for me;
I sense all stars, and know their names,
Their source, their fragrant mystery.

I am as one who walks alone
Through shadowed garden of delight,
Seeing the Great Beyond in the forms,
I know an intimate of night.
—Clinton Scollard, in Poetry.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"For whom are you going to vote?"
"Before I attempt to answer," rejoined Miss Cayenne, "let me understand whether this is a political or a social question."
"It is an invitation to a joint debate," Washington Star.

"Daddy is going to start a matrimonial agency."
"What get him going that way?"
"Says he can see great possibilities in that business now that photographs can be sent by mail."
"The man—But you got to consider that God made man before He made woman."
The Woman—Of course He did. He has to have something to practice on before He attempted to make a real human being.—Folkets Dagblad Politiken.

Scout Bill (on a summer hike): Say,
Jack, let's divide our ration.
Scout Jack: Let's. I have a canteen of water.

Scout Bill: And I have de'ed tongue.
Scout Jack: Now that you have had your share of the water I'd like a bit of that dried tongue.

Scout Bill: I haven't got any new—Scout Jack: Good Life.

"Going to turn over a new leaf this year?"
"Not at the present cost of white paper."
—Detroit Free Press.

"Critic—What happened in your play, Adam and Eve?"
"Manager—Ten, the fellow who plays
Adam said he got tired of eating cold straw apples.—Houston Post.

"I got up at 3 o'clock this morning."
"I forgot to wind the clock."
"Hardly. I arose to read the paper while the gas was good."—Buffalo Express.

"What are you out with?"
"Ten Nights in a Barroom."
"Why, that play was old when I was a boy."
The house on but it's doing additional business now.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

"You can't get something for nothing," said the man of severe countenance.
"I dunno. I got nothing for something in the mine deal last week and I can't see but what it's a good deal better than the other fellow's.—Boston Transcript.

"John" began the wife sternly. "I noticed your coat on the hall stand the morning after the party with me. How did that happen?"
"Serry my dear," responded hubby.
"I dropped it in the gutter as I was coming out, and it was there when I came back." "Ah, and were you in it?"—American Legion Weekly.

"What is Mr. Bibble's attitude toward prohibition?"
"He is a neutral attitude. I believe having resignation with anxious inquiry."
"How's that?"
"He's satisfied the country is going to stay dry and is desiring his own time to investigating the passport situation."
—Birmingham Age-Herald.
