BURIED THREE FORMER SOLDIERS IN ONE GRAVE New York, July 13.—Violation of a contract with the United States cemetery authorities allowed an undertaker to bury three former soldiers in one grave in a Long Island cemetery was disclosed today.

Investigation today by the health service revealed that none of these requirements had been met with. Cemetery records also showed that three other veterans who died in a hospital and were unclaimed by relatives were buried in a single grave. In two other cases two former soldiers had been interred in one grave.

Colonel C. K. Haskell, inspector for the health service, said today the undertaker who had been awarded a contract to bury ex-servicemen was also responsible for the public health hospitals was an ex-convict.

A nurse who visited the cemetery to arrange for the placing of a headstone on the grave of a former soldier friend recently was responsible for the investigation. She was told she had better arrange to have three names inscribed on the tablet, as there were three bodies in the grave. She reported the matter to the health service.

PROTEST SEIZURE OF SHIPS CARRYING ALCOHOL Washington, July 13.—Protests against enforcement by customs officials of a section of the Volstead prohibition enforcement act which subjects to seizure foreign vessels coming within the three-mile limit with liquor aboard are reaching the state department. It was learned today from representatives of international steamship lines, including those who have come from various embassies and legations, said to indicate that foreign governments were becoming concerned at threatened interference with their shipping.

It has been pointed out that a British ship bound from Halifax to Jamaica could not put into Hampton Roads or any American port for fuel or supplies without risk of seizure if she carried spirits in her cargo, under the construction which has been given to the law by the recent decision of Attorney General Daugherty, reaffirming an opinion of his predecessor. Furthermore, it is anticipated by the shipping interests that another opinion withdrawing the present privilege of sealing up the bar supplies on the ocean liners within the three-mile limit is to be expected, in which case vessels also would be subject to seizure if they carried liquors for the use of passengers.

COAKLEY CLAIMS NO AGREEMENT WITH TUFTS Boston, July 13.—Testimony before the supreme court in the proceedings through which Attorney General J. Weston Allen is seeking to force Attorney Nathan A. Tufts, of Middlesex county, switched late today from the Mishawum Manor midwifery festivities in March 1917, to the escape from prison and the subsequent capture of Herman L. Barney, convicted slayer of a policeman. One of the attorney general's allegations against Mr. Tufts concerns the part the latter had in returning Barney to Charleston state prison, from which he escaped on the night of May 30, 1918.

Assistant District Attorney General Hulbert called to the witness stand Stephen C. Bremanan, an attorney, who testified that in Northampton, on the night of the escape, Barney was taken, Mr. Tufts, Barney, officers of the Northampton police department, and the witness had driven together in an automobile down a street to that city.

Bremanan testified that Barney had come to his home in North Cambridge the night after the escape and that he met the fugitive on three subsequent occasions before Barney was taken to the witness stand by Mr. Tufts at the home of Joseph Melus in Northampton.

Previous to the testimony on the Barney incident, Daniel H. Coakley, to whom some New York motion picture producers appealed in their efforts to keep out of the courts and the witness testified that he had been present at a midwinter dinner at Mishawum Manor in 1917 testified that he happened to handle the case for one hundred thousand dollars and take a gambler's chance of obtaining for what remained after settlement of all claims.

There remained after the claims had been settled, releases obtained and expenses paid, he testified, $15,000. Mr. Coakley said. In addition a member of his office staff had received thirteen thousand dollars.

Coakley testified that he never had had an agreement with Tufts that the matter of the Mishawum dinner would not be presented to the grand jury if he could get rid of the people complaining, who were understood to be relatives of some of the women at the dinner. He was satisfied, he said, that no evidence would be presented if there was none to present and he worked to eliminate Tufts, he said, how much his clients paid or how much he received himself.

The witness said he regarded the women at Mishawum Manor as immoral and he never believed that any of them had a legitimate claim out of the affair, but added that his job "was to see that no suits were brought," he worked to end but when I paid I believed they were all bad claims, all phony and dishonest," he said.

He testified that soon after he came into the case Irlin Abrams, Walter Green and Harry Asher came to Cambridge and introduced them to District Attorney Tufts so that he might see that they were respectable business men of high standing.

Tufts said that his information from the police was that it was a "bad party," according to the witness, and that he did not think a small town like Woburn tenderloin practices that might show in a big city should be tolerated. Tufts he told him that unless he (Coakley) heard from him, the cases would not be presented to the grand jury before the following month. Coakley having asked an opportunity to show that his clients had done nothing wrong.

START CHLORINATING OF WATER

The two new chlorinating plants for the Norwich water supply which were started in operation yesterday, one of them at the meter house on the pipe line from Stony Brook reservoir and the other at the meter house in the pipe line electric motor below the dam at Fairview reservoir.

As explained Wednesday by R. B. Mowry, erecting engineer for the Wallace and Tiernan Co., of New York, who made the chlorinating plants, Norwich is now provided with the same kind of protection against bacteria in the water as most of the largest cities in the world have, including New York, Paris, London, Chicago and most of the important cities of the United States.

This process of treating water with chlorine gas, said Mr. Mowry, has been extensively adopted ever since experiments in 1914 demonstrated its effectiveness. There is absolutely no danger from its use, it does not change the physical characteristics of the water, but it does act as a perfect preventive against bacteria and organic matter in the water.

Every detail of the operation of the chlorinating process on the water that reaches the physical characteristics of the water, but it does act as a perfect preventive against bacteria and organic matter in the water. The operation of the two plants are automatic and the possibility of overfeeding or underfeeding the water with the chlorine. No trace of the chlorine can be detected after it has been added to the water. At the point where it was put in and by the time the water reaches the consumer, the gas has been completely mixed with the water.

Because of the conditions under which the chlorinating is done on the two Norwich pipe lines, there is difference in the two chlorinating plants. The one installed at the Stony Brook line, the gas goes into the main tank under an 80 pound pressure. This necessitates a pump of compressed air at the Stony Brook meter house, which forces the chlorine into the water under 80 pounds pressure.

At Fairview, where the chlorinating is done, the water is under a few hundred feet from the dam, the water pressure in the main is only 20 pounds and no pump is required.

It was shown that 9 pounds of chlorine to 1,000,000 gallons of water had been used in the first 24 hours, or at the rate of 3 pounds to a million gallons. The flow of chlorine had been less, 2 pounds of chlorine had been used, making 12 run without certificates, somebody is going to be arrested." The motor vehicle department is planning to issue special markers for jitneys in the near future and these will bear the letter J so that cars bearing them can easily be identified by the inspectors. These markers will be issued only to those persons who have already received a certificate from the public utilities commission to operate a jitney. But until the new system can be established and the markers turned out the holders of certificates will continue to use the present markers.

Under the rules for the regulation of jitneys adopted by the public utilities commission, the commission is to furnish certified jitney operators with a schedule of run aimed at description of the route to be followed. But this has not as yet been done owing to the avalanche of work that the law has precipitated on the commission.

SIN FEINERS RELEASE EARL OF BANDON London, July 13.—The parliamentary correspondent of the London Times says it is expected that T. J. Austin Chamberlain government leader in the house of commons, and Sir Hamar Greenwood chief secretary for Ireland will be with Prime Minister Lloyd George when he meets Edmond De Valera tomorrow afternoon.

The release last night of the Earl of Bandon, who was kidnapped last month by Sinn Fein, has given a wider character to the trace in Ireland, declared the correspondent. He adds the government has ordered reopening of sections of the Irish railways which have been closed in consequence of Sinn Fein activities.

$215,000 ALCOHOLIC CARGO SEIZED AT BOSTON Boston, July 13.—Taking a search warrant for the foremast of the bark Tiberion in the absence of the captain to receive it, prohibition enforcement officers headed by Field Supervisor John L. Prohibition officials tonight declared they had proof that a portion at least of the Tiberion's cargo had been landed illegally but what the proof consisted of was not divulged.

Reported Betrothed To Princess Mary Of England

Persistent rumors state that Princess Mary, the only daughter of King George V, will marry Lord Alton of Liverpool, youngest son of the Earl of Bathurst. Queen Mary is said to highly approve the match. Lord Alton is a typical young English aristocrat, a tall scholarly young man who is worthy to be the consort of the only daughter of the royal house. Lord Alton's mother is the owner of the Morning Post, the organ of the British aristocracy.

Another list of applicants for whom a hearing was held in Norwich, where Judge T. J. Kelly appeared as counsel for the applicants, included John Gino, 28 Franklin street, Norwich, for a certificate to operate a jitney on Norwich taxi work except for Sept. 5, 6 and 7, when he would like to run from Norwich to Norwich fair grounds; for the following other applications of Walter H. Griggs, 23 North Main street, Norwich; Henry A. Belair, 51 Jackson street, Williamsville, and Wilfred Blanchette, 175 Jackson street, Williamsville, for a certificate to operate a jitney on the following routes:

Beginning at Williamsville, ending at Norwich, Williamsville on Railroad street, Main street, Windham road, South Windham, Lebanon, Franklin, Yantic, Bean Hill, Norwich town, Norwich, Broadway and Union square.

In New London, it is stated that Attorney George C. Moran, counsel for several of the jitneymen, anticipating that when July 15 arrives the police will enforce the law, has counseled his clients to continue to operate, and if arrested and released under bond, to again continue operating and submit to a second arrest. When legal steps were taken to shut them out, the jitneymen's decisions of similar cases in other cities.

The commission is alleged to have granted licenses to jitney drivers operating between New London and Niantic and between New London and the United States Submarine Base. The alleged grounds for the granting of licenses in these two cases are that "public convenience and necessity" demand service on these routes.

The various branches of the state government which are concerned with the enforcement of the new jitney law were preparing Wednesday for any development that might arise. The commission's action of Friday, the act provides that it shall become effective, so far as the issuing of certificates is concerned, ninety days after its date, but that though Thursday will be the ninetieth day, it has been decided actually to take action under the law on Friday. On that day it will be illegal for any jitney to operate in Connecticut without a certificate from the public utilities commission.

Motor Vehicle Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel Wednesday said that although the law technically becomes effective Thursday he did not think it would be possible to begin its strict enforcement until the new markers which his department is to issue had been delivered. Commissioner Stoeckel does not expect these until Friday at the earliest. The commissioner prepared a list of the legal points which he wishes cleared up before taking action and this will be presented to the attorney general of the state for rulings.

The public utilities commission is hurriedly sending out the last of the certificates which have been granted. The motor vehicle commission is issuing licenses to those who have been granted certificates and offering but little consolation to those who have failed to get them. The state police and the inspectors of the motor vehicle department are getting ready to check up on public service vehicles which appear on the streets Friday and will make arrests in case the necessary certificate cannot be shown.

Wednesday the public utilities commission sent Motor Vehicle Commissioner Stoeckel a list of all jitney men in the state who have been granted certificates. Although there has as yet been no ruling by the attorney general on the question, as to whether a jitney is entitled to operate while his appeal to the superior court is pending, Commissioner Stoeckel on Wednesday told Attorney Robbins B. Stoeckel that "if jitneys try to

NEW ENGLAND PEACHES ARE 10 PER CENT CROPPED Connecticut's tobacco prospects are better than last year at this time, the peach crop in New England is 10 per cent normal and all other crops have been greatly benefited by the present rains according to the New England crop report by A. Saunders, crop specialist of the United States bureau of markets and crop estimates, at Wakefield, Mass. His report follows in part.

But little rain in northern counties of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont since early May while the rest of New England, though injured somewhat by June drought received rains the end of June and the New England average is one of the lightest on record, being $6 per cent. last year and $8 per cent. the average. Dry regions have only half a crop, with no large stock of old hay.

New England pastures have suffered about the same as hay, the condition now being 65 against 93 last year and average of 80. Milk production has decreased rapidly in drought regions. Hay, pasture and oats have improved much in regions receiving rain recently.

New England oats with an average condition of 81 are about 15 points below the average and last year, being very short in dry regions with heads only half length, and farmers will grow more of them than usual. Some good pieces of winter wheat, United States average, are below average, condition 77.8; last year 84.7; 10-year average, 51.3. Acreage 1925 per cent. of 1920.

Wheat of New England now grows south of the drought area. Recent rains and hot weather have pushed it along rapidly. It is generally much better than last year. United States average, 80. New England peaches continue irregular but average around 75 per cent. of a crop—lightest in Rhode Island; best in Massachusetts. United States peaches condition of 81; last year 61; average 59. Peas less than average crop. Blueberries greatly benefited by recent rains; now ripening.
