NORWICH TOWN

Many of the residents in the vicinity of Huntington Green, the plot opposite the Norwich Town Methodist church, feel much indebted to the presentable group of trees to this past spring trees planted and other ways have made this historical spot attractive and beautiful.

Monday evening the Methodist church Christian Endeavor Society held a camp-fire social on the premises of Mr. and Mrs. William Thatcher of Tanner avenue. After a lunch of frankfurters, rolls cake and marshmallows were served to nearly fifty, all gathered around the camp-fire to listen to stories and participate in singing. This pleasant time is credited to Mr. and Mrs. Thatcher and Miss Josephine Smith.

What is the result of trying to cheapen them? Apply this to the individual, the church, the state. Scripture references are to be found in Luke 14: 31 and 32; 1 Corinthians 13: 3 and 4.

JUDGE KEELER SOON TO GIVE DECISION ON NEW HAVEN JINNEY INJUNCTION

Norwich Jinney operators, with others all over the state, had their attention focused on New Haven Tuesday when Judge John E. Keeler was to hear the arguments on the injunction sought by New Haven city authorities from enforcing the new law against Jinney drivers who had been unable to obtain certificates from the public utilities commission.

At the close of the hearing the judge indicated that a decision would be announced within a few days. He will give his consideration of the case Thursday morning and has promised the attorneys on both sides that the wait would not be long.

Should Judge Keeler decide to grant the injunction, it is anticipated that there will be scores of applications for similar injunctions from all over the state. The judge said that he would file his decision in the usual manner with the clerk of the New Haven county superior court. He was asked by Attorney Bronson of Waterbury whether it would not be possible to make some special arrangements so that the press of the state could be informed as to what a decision was reached. To this the judge replied that he did not think such a precaution would be necessary as the newspapers had always been well kept advised of the proceedings as soon as it was officially announced.

About 400 men, most of them evidently in sympathy with the Jinney's side of the injunction, attended the hearing, which lasted from 9 o'clock till about 12:30.

One Spokesman for Jinneys.
The half dozen lawyers representing Jinneys who were present decided that Attorney R. J. Woodruff of New Haven should act as spokesman for them, and the main argument for the injunction was presented by him. The Connecticut company in its opposition to the granting of the injunction was represented by Attorneys George Day Watrous of New Haven and Joseph Berry of Hartford.

No Appeal Clause.
In the course of the hearing Judge Keeler said: "It would have been a fine thing if a clause of three or four lines had been in this bill providing that the Jinneys might run pending an appeal. But that was not done."

Suggests Test Case.
In response to suggestions that a prompt settlement of the issue was most desirable, Judge Keeler said: "The quickest way would be to have a man arrested and convicted in the city court, have him appeal to the common pleas court, have him convicted again, and then bring the case to the supreme court about the first of October."

Attorney Woodruff said that his clients would welcome such a procedure. In his plea for the injunction, Attorney Woodruff said that the new law granted police powers to the public utilities commission and was unconstitutional. He argued that the law was not regulatory but prohibitory and he maintained that an appeal would act as a superadequacy, thus pending the case and operate pending a decision on the case.

"The public follows the line of least resistance," said he, "and hence it is only natural that the Jinneys are patronized as they are cheap and quick and convenient that the trolley cars."

He said that the power bestowed on the public utilities commission was too great and pointed out that the Jinneys are not objecting to "regulation" but were protesting against "extinction."

"This law is arbitrary and oppressive," he declared, "because it gives a man a right to a certificate and it provides that the commission can order the Jinneys to follow a specific route. In this case the public utilities commission is allowed to do just as it pleases."

Breaking in on the argument of Attorney Woodruff, Attorney Berry asked permission to file an application for an injunction restraining the Derby Bus corporation from proceeding further on its present course of operation.

"We came here to try this case, and here is this man with another," protested Attorney Woodruff, and Judge Keeler advised Attorney Berry that his appeal for an injunction should be presented to Judge Hinman.

Attorney Watrous read a lengthy brief in which he maintained that it could not be justly claimed, as Attorney Woodruff had asserted, that the new regulation took any property rights away from the Jinneys as they were not owners of their machines nor did it deprive them of any of their rights as public carriers.

He maintained that the law was in no sense unconstitutional and that the utilities commission was acting well within its rights.

New Haven Police to Wait.
City Attorney Whitaker of New Haven announced that no action would be taken by the city authorities pending the decision of Judge Keeler, and the judge replied: "It will not be long before this case is out of my hands. I am not going to hold court here all summer. If I issue an injunction, I am enjoining from any prosecution in the police court. I will take the whole subject into consideration."

The judge then asked the court clerks what the transcript of the proceedings would be ready and when they would be finished by Wednesday afternoon. It was then that he announced his intention of taking up the matter Thursday morning and, pushing it to an early decision.

Norwich police authorities are waiting like the rest, and the Jinneys are doing business without interruption here.

WATERFORD HAY DEMONSTRATION HELD ON TWO FARMS

The farm bureau pot dressing demonstration of Waterford on the farms of H. B. Whitman at Gilead and Stanley Morgan at Lakes Farm, near Gilead, was held on the demonstration on Mr. Morgan's farm was a little heavier than that on Mr. Whitman's but it is hardly fair to compare the weights on the different farms since the demonstration plot of Mr. Whitman's farm has been in grass for nine or ten years, while that on Mr. Morgan's farm was seeded down a couple of years ago. The following are the results obtained on Mr. Whitman's demonstration. The manure and acid phosphate plot gave an increase of 1,190 pounds of hay over the no-fertilizer plot, while the 6-8-4 fertilizer plot yielded 1,060 pounds of hay more than the no-fertilizer plot. The plots on which bone with nitrate of soda and acid phosphate with nitrate of soda was applied did not show as large an increase, 429 pounds being obtained on the bone plot and 50 pounds on the acid phosphate plot.

The demonstration on Mr. Morgan's farm showed an increase for the 6-8-4 fertilizer of 310 pounds per acre over the no-fertilizer plot; 1,120 pounds per acre was the increase of the bone over the no-fertilizer and 680 pounds was the increase of the acid phosphate plot over the no-fertilizer. For some reason the plot on which manure and acid phosphate was used showed a smaller weight than the plot on which no fertilizer was used.

WILL IMPROVE ROADWAY TOWARDS SAYBROOK BRIDGE
Plans are now under way to spend a large amount of money on the trunk road which between New London and the Saybrook bridge. The shoulders of the roadway are to be raised six inches. Some day a new bridge must be built at Golden Spout, this bridge being so narrow that it is impossible to pass over it. Numerous accidents have occurred when two machines have attempted to pass on the bridge. Then again automobilists have come to grief through striking the bridge in the dark or in a dense fog.

John J. Murphy of Waterford, who has been in charge of state road work from the New London town line of Waterford as far as the town of East Lyme, has now had the town of Lyme added to his territory because of his attention to the job and his good judgment in keeping the highway in repair and free from snow during the winter.

He succeeds Frank Saunders, who had Lyme and Old Lyme, and who now has Old Lyme only under his jurisdiction.

Murphy is the originator of the idea of painting a white mark with an arrow at either end at curves on the state highway. This scheme may be generally adopted by the highway department as the idea is to lessen chances of accidents on curves.

Danger Sign Now at Ocean Beach.
The drowning accident at the west end of Ocean Beach near the mouth of Alewife Cove Sunday forenoon has caused the board of park commissioners to order the erection of a danger sign in the water near the location of the fatal hol where the bathers, Pasquale Sonnybarte of Norwich, lost his life, and where several other bathers have come near to drowning in the past. There was formerly a sign there but it disappeared some time ago.

Practically the entire length of the beach bathing is considered safe with this single exception. Aside from the deep water adjacent to shoal water not more than waist deep, there is a strong current at this place which sometimes makes swimming difficult for the strongest and most adept.

A new feature in life saving at the beach this season is the placing about every 400 feet along the beach of movable posts with heavy cement base, each bearing a life preserver and a coil of rope to be thrown to anyone out beyond his depth and in distress.

Workmen's Compensation
The working workmen's compensation agreement has been approved by Commissioner J. J. Donohue.

NORTH CAPE TOURISTS ARRIVE AT BERGEN

On June 25th, a well known tourist company started one of their excursions from New York to Iceland and the Mid-Norway country to North Cape on the coast of Norway, the farthest north inhabited place in the world. They sailed with a list of 445 passengers on the liner ship "Empress of India." This is the first excursion of the kind ever made by them. They did not stop at Iceland, as the schedule called for on account of an influenza epidemic prevailing there and they were not allowed to make a landing at that place. They have been able to follow their scheduled route with that exception, and a cablegram just received reports that they have arrived at Bergen, Norway, and that all are well on board. The trip was dated July 15th, this being the last stop before reaching Edinburgh, Scotland.

From Edinburgh they sail to Amsterdam, Antwerp and Brussels, and then return to London, arriving there on July 25th. This ends the trip on the "Empress of India" and on July 30th, those who wish are booked to sail for New York on the "Mauritania" which will arrive at New York, thus completing the six weeks' excursion.

Among the list of passengers from this locality are the Misses Atwood of Waukegan, Daniel L. Brown of this city and Mr. Denison of Groton.

POETRY

JULY
Now that the air is cool and heat,
Now there are pretty moon
Oh, children, lift your chorus sweet
In the high, happy tunes!

Let all your delecting voices sing
Like thrushes in the corn
In praise of her, the fairest thing
Since all good elves were born.

The cowslip and the cherry
Are summer's bread and wine,
But she's more kind and merry,
But she's more soft and fine.

She's slender hands and pretty lips
And seam and rosmery
Her ears are pointed at the tips
She stayed so long in Fairy.

Oh, "Love's a fool" say all the wise,
"Young man, keep cool, keep cool"
But while you're here, at her eyes
I'll be a perfect fool.

—Stephen Vincent Benet, in The Bookman.

AFROIT.

Comes the rule of green things growing
Comes the call of waters flowing—
"Am as green as the grass,"
Moves and wakes and would be going

Hark the migrant hoots of June
Marching nearer noon by noon!
Hark the gossip of the grasses
Blow-sucked beneath the moon!

Long the quest and far the ending
When my wayfarer is wending—
When desire is once afoot,
Doom behind and dream attending!

In his ears the phantom chime
Of incommunicable rhyme,
He shall chase the fleeting campfires
Of the seducers of Time.

Fare ye uncharted ways,
Dumb as death to daisy or trailer,
Unreturning he shall journey,
Follow to the night's and day's.

Till upon the outer bar
Stilled the morning currents are,
Till the flame advice of the zenith,
Till the moth attains the star.

Till through laughter and through tears
Fair the final page appears—
And about the watered pastures
Sink to sleep the Charles G. D. Roberts.
