Public Health Nursing Shows More Calls

Several steps taken in the early part of the present year by the public health nursing department of the United Workers looking towards expansion of the work and increased efficiency have brought most encouraging results in the first five months of trial. One of the efficiency improvements noted has been in the greater number of calls which the nurses have averaged, going from seven daily for each nurse in 1920 to slightly in excess of nine calls daily from January 1 to June 1 in the present year.

The department in 1920 had the following personnel, a superintendent, two staff nurses, and one special nurse for tuberculosis work only. During the year 1921, 5416 calls were made, exclusive of any calls made by the superintendent. Of these, 1075 were made by the special tuberculosis nurse, thus leaving 4341 calls made by the two staff nurses. There were 17 Sundays when no calls were made, and on the remaining 35 Sundays calls occupied a half day. There were 82 children's clinics during the year, the average was seven calls for each nurse. Calls of course, vary greatly in length, but forty-five minutes is considered a fair average.

In January, owing to the impossibility of replacing the special tuberculosis nurse, it became necessary to reorganize the department. The personnel consisted of Miss Elizabeth Culver, and three staff nurses.

RESCUED FROM LEAKY BOAT IN THE RACE

John Gilmore, civilian employe at Fort Terry, Plum Island, and Sergeant Murphy, the Port Terry detail, were rescued from being drowned or at least carried out to sea, by Captain E. H. Murray, keeper of Little Gull Island, Sunday afternoon at 4:30. The men were in a leaky and rapidly filling dory in the stretch of water known as the Race between Fishers Island and Plum Island. The two men had started to row to Little Gull Island early in the afternoon but when a short distance from the island the boat sprang a leak, and they were forced to abandon the oars and take to bailing out the boat.

Meanwhile an offshore wind sprang up and the boat was blown around the east end of Little Gull Island, and into the race. The tide was on the ebb and the waters of the Race, rushing towards the ocean, were choppy. The boat was shipping toward the open, when Captain Murray witnessed the men's plight from the lower of the Little Gull Light. He hastened to their aid in the station launch, but due to the rough water considerable difficulty was experienced in transferring them to his launch. The boat was finally accomplished and with the dory in tow, and sinking rapidly, the launch was headed for Gull Island. The men were nearly exhausted when Captain Murray reached them, and for this reason they were taken to Fort Michie on Gull Island because the distance was considerably shorter than to Fort Terry, and they were in need of medical attention. Before the launch had proceeded very far, the dory sank below the surface of the water, and when beached at Gull Island it was found that one of the seams had ripped open.

STONINGTON MEN PAY FOR HAVING SHORT LOBSTERS

Acting under orders from County Game Warden Robert B. Chappell, Deputy Game Wardens Ross, Wilcox, O'Connor and Ramistella are continuing a roundup of alleged violators of the lobster fishing laws, with remarkable success. On Saturday the deputies arrested Joseph Victoria and Charles Davis, both of Stonington on charges of possessing short lobsters. The former had 46 short lobsters when arrested by the officers. Before Judge F. H. Hinckley in Stonington town court, on Saturday, he was fined $10 and costs, amounting in all to $34.52. Davis' family was found to be in very destitute circumstances, and for this reason, the charges against him were continued for eight weeks.

Monday morning Andro Mixer and John M. Siza, both of Stonington, were presented before Judge Hinckley, the former charged with possessing short lobsters, and the latter on a similar charge, with the additional charge of fishing without a permit. Mixer was fined $10 and costs, totaling $34.27 and Siza was also fined $10 and costs, amounting in all to $34.47.

Several persons charged with fishing without permits were before the court, but were released when they agreed to file application for permits. The fine for violation of the fishing permit law is $50 and in view of the fact that it was the first offense for all concerned, it was the opinion of the court that a fine of this amount would be excessive.

On their way back to New London, the deputy wardens came across Ira T. Latham, also a Stonington resident, who they claim had short lobsters, but threw them overboard, before his launch could be boarded by the officers. No disposition of his case has been made yet.

KILLED BY TRAIN IN NEW HAVEN R. YARD

THE TWO ROADS.
One road winds through the meadow-land,
Closer to nature's green,
The other through the wild, deep wood
Embowered in leafy screen.

One road looks to the sounding sea;
On cliffs through mountain's mill;
On that I bear the meadow-ark,
On this the wild-poor-will.

A zigzag fence runs by that road,
Trained with the wild-grape bloom;
A carpet white and gold;
On this along a rocky steep,
Green ferns in wealth unfold,
Beneath the pine trees' gloom.

On that road in the glinting fields
A carpet white and gold;
On this along a rocky steep,
Green ferns in wealth unfold.

By one road scolding hob-o-links
And friendly robins peep;
But by the other sings the thrush
And sharp-voiced vireo.

Over pools at eye level that read
The blackbirds through winging;
On this in some secluded nook
The hermit thrushes sing.

One road is fragrant with the scent
Of fields of new-mown hay,
Beside the other, soft with moss,
Brooks flash with sparkling ray.

Now by which road of these I go,
Or which I love the best,
Depends on who in with me goes,
For I am not your best friend,
—Richmond Herbert Geener, in Boston Transcript.

LITTLE GAY HEART OF ME.

Little gay heart of me, you who went
To the singing
Little gay heart of me, you who went
To the singing
Little gay heart of me, you who went
To the singing

What have they done to you out of their
Strooping the voices of you,
Calling it light
Was this you, one who could listen in kindness,
Catch the true note of you.

Hands that lie idle now, spirit that's weary,
Once to your singing wrought
The music of life,
Out of the darkness, so heavy and dreary,
Sing once again!
—Mary Stewart, in Good Housekeeping.

"Yes, and it was blazing because she was put for me."—Baltimore American.
Mrs. Eke (returning from call)—"How could you be so extravagant in your praise of that girl's wretched duds? You told her, 'Remember, don't do no better.'"—Mr. Eke—"Well, her coat's 'Remember' is dead."—Boston Transcript.

"How did you come to be a firefighter?"
"It was all because of the law of supply and demand," whispered the culprit. "I was the only one with a sufficient supply of money to meet the demand for it."—Ottawa Citizen.

"The City Nephew—"I'm glad to see Aunt Hetty dresses her hair sensibly instead of wearing those silly puffs over her ears."
Uncle Tallhammer—"She tried 'em once an' they got tangled up with the telephone wires, so she missed more'n half the gossip goin' on over 25 party lines."—Exchange.

"Talking about attracting attention, here is a girl in Pennsylvania who has been talking me forcibly by her appearance."
"Does she fascinate them?"
"No; she sandbags them."—Baltimore American.
