WASHBURN—CHAMPION SILK CASE TO BE RESUMED OCT. 17TH

Before Judge George E. Hilmann, at Rockville, Oct. 17th, there will be an adjourned hearing in the civil case of H. K. and W. A. Washburn against the Champion Silk company in the Tolland County superior court. The Washburns have a silk mill in South Coventry and the Champion company has a plant in Pottsville, Penn., and does business consisting of dyeing and spooling silks.

The South Coventry firm claim that the Champion Silk company owes them $5,000 for silk thrown during 1920 and they have brought this suit to recover their claim. The Champion Silk Co. owned a mill in Gurleyville which was burned last July and in order to secure their claim the Washburns have attached the $20,000 insurance money.

Guderoode Brothers Silk company of New York city holds a controlling interest in the Champion Silk company. The firm does not manufacture silk but takes orders and has the work done by the Champion Silk company. It was the contention of the Champion Silk company that the amount was owed the Washburn firm by the Guderoode company as they took the contract from the Guderoodes and sublet it to Washburns.

Colechester Suit for $2,000. In a suit returnable before the superior court on the first Tuesday in November, Julius Oski of Colechester has brought an action against Stanislaus Chmel of Colechester for $2,000 on the common counts.
