

CARPENTIER KAYOED COOK IN FOURTH

London, Jan. 12.—(By the A. P.)—George Carpentier, heavyweight champion boxer of France, was kayoed by a fourth round cook, the American, in a boxing match at the Grand Central arena, New York, today.

The referee, Jack Guinn, declared the count of ten, but was too late. The referee was announced as Cook, the name of the American, who was kayoed by Carpentier in the fourth round, scoring with both his left and right without a return. Cook was a very strong but inexperienced fighter, inflicting a knock-out on the champion, who had a marked advantage. Cook had a very heavy right hand, but was not used to the close of the close of the close.

Both men were exhausted at the beginning of the fourth round. Carpentier landed a left hook to the jaw and another to the forehead of the American, who was knocked out. The referee, who was standing by the champion, failed to find a referee for the fight.

Here their dialogue was interrupted by the clicking of the telegraph receiver. Ted sauntered over to the gum machine and surveyed himself as best he could in the little circle of mirror.

He bestowed a second or two on his tie and began to caress his mustache. At least Ted claimed it was a mustache; but were he not a six-footer some of his acquaintances might have differed. However, it was still very young and, like all young things, was rather weak, with its best days before it.

"Ted!" Something in Ira's voice startled him, and he rushed to the ticket window. Consternation was written on every line of Ira's face.

"S-say, Ted, was there some friend of yours on the 3:45?" "What's the matter?" "It's gone over the banking at Fairfield Junction. Some mix-up in signals—had a collision."

Ted felt the hot blood surge through his arteries. "My God! Ira, do they—was anybody hurt?" Ira spent the next few minutes frantically checking his instrument, while Ted waited tensely, as pale as a statue and as rigid.

The Strange Liking

By Parke Whitney

WHEN you go to New York you show you the Woolworth building or the Brooklyn Bridge, and when with craned neck or bulging eyes you merely gaze and exclaim "hey, hey!" then your Manhattan friend nonchalantly turns away with the remark, "Not a bad little building."

Well, why under the sun doesn't he buy a real automobile? These Fords of his are camouflaged with wire wheels and made-to-order bodies so they almost deceive you, but still they are only Fords when all's said and done.

Just so do the natives of Woodfield conduct their visiting friends to the Stafford poultry farm. Strangers invariably admire the magnificent home and grounds of the millionaire owner, and at sight of the immense farm just black with poultry houses invariably their eyes bulge, they gasp and declare, "Good night!" "It's certainly some place," they say, "but one thing puzzles me. You say this Stafford is a millionaire?"

"Yes, sir, Ted Stafford made his pile all right," and Cy smiles to himself at enjoying some secret joke.

Here their dialogue was interrupted by the clicking of the telegraph receiver. Ted sauntered over to the gum machine and surveyed himself as best he could in the little circle of mirror. He bestowed a second or two on his tie and began to caress his mustache. At least Ted claimed it was a mustache; but were he not a six-footer some of his acquaintances might have differed. However, it was still very young and, like all young things, was rather weak, with its best days before it.
