

Aged Man Obtains Renewed Vigor

Mr. Wm. H. Moore, of 23 Warner St., Oneida, N. Y. was failing fast.

Says 'Wincarnis' quickly restored strength

Mr. Moore's Statement
I take pleasure in testifying as to my experience with Wincarnis, both as a duty to those who may need such a remedy, and from a positive feeling of gratitude to the compounders of it. Am a man quite advanced in years, over 70 and for some time had been getting myself failing faster, and in ways other than my age alone would seem to account for. Had tried various medicines which seemed to benefit me for a time, but inevitably caused a relapse. Happened to see an advertisement of Wincarnis, and thought I'd try once more. With the first dose I realized that I had found something entirely new of the common, something which "reached the spot" at once. Have now been using it over a month with very marked benefit in increased strength, better appetite, sounder sleep, and greater ability for my work, which is of a nature which taxes my endurance at my age somewhat severely.

Wincarnis is sold in Norwich by National Drug Stores, Main and Shuteket Streets, and all first-class druggists.

COLUMBIA

A very interesting meeting regarding the marketing prospects for poultry supplies as they now are and as they are liable to be within a year or two was held Thursday evening in the church at Liberty Hill, Madison Woodward, representing the largest poultry farm in the local section, was the speaker.

Harold F. Johnson of Norwich announced the purpose of the work. I. G. Davis, marketing specialist from the extension department of the Connecticut Agricultural college, was the speaker of the evening. One point prominently brought forward was that New England, acknowledged to be the best market for high class eggs, is a very small producer.

Eggs from China are being imported into this country in large numbers, so as they are all seeking markets for their eggs they have discovered New England to be the best, and naturally are endeavoring to secure it.

The snowfall amounted to about two inches on the level here but the snow

The subjects of grading, packing, volume of business, etc., were thoroughly discussed. Those present informed the meeting of the number of birds they had, what prices they were averaging for their eggs, the state of marketing, and other information which made a very practical survey of this locality on egg marketing, which was the ultimate object of the meeting. About 49 persons were present, about as many as could comfortably be accommodated in the room.

Since the present county agent in Tolland county, E. M. Tucker, has been in office, there has been occasional requests for aid in marketing, but with the exception of milk and tobacco there has not up to the present time seemed to be enough unity of purpose nor enough volume of business to make the marketing of other products worth considering. This meeting and others, the first of which was held in Andover and many were held in Windham and New London counties, are a feeling-out of the temper of Connecticut people to see whether they are ready to consider constructive work towards marketing of crops and other products of the state.

GREAT CHANGE NOTED IN NEW YORK'S CHINATOWN

New York, Feb. 13.—An old Chinese, veteran of the Tong wars of other days, stood in the door of his curio shop in Manhattan's Chinatown today, and stroked the head of a mongrel pup that lay at his feet.

His attitude was typical of the entire quarter. Chinatown was too lazy, or perhaps too uninterested, to get excited over the news that Tong Wars had started on the Pacific coast, and that the Chinese quarter in San Francisco was snatched in excitement, fearing that it would be drawn into the battle.

Patrolman John Abe, guardian of Manhattan's Chinatown, leaning against a post at Mott street and Chatham square, yesterday warned and dryly remarked: "Chinatown is a joke—not enough top left to chase a cat."

Patrolman Abe has been walking through the narrow streets of Pell, Dyer and Mott for more than ten years. He first was sent there in the existing days that followed the killing of Etje Segal and the shooting of Mook Dugan, those bloody days of war that ended in the signing of a treaty between all the gangs, a treaty which has, in the main, been faithfully observed.

"Top," said Abe, "top is all gone. The only fighter left in Chinatown is George Lee. He's a bantamweight and goes up to Madison Square Garden to scrap."

"Five years ago there still was a lot of queer doin's down here, but Doyce street now is just like a sidewalk in Woodlawn cemetery. Optum, not enough to fill a pipe. Gunmen? Well, they may come down here but they don't operate on my beat, see."

"What, me got a soft job? Say, I have to be a doctor, lawyer, undertaker's man, spiritual adviser and what not for these people."

"The reason they quit their Tong wars was that they learned Sing Sing and the electric chair could hold Chinese the same as anybody else. That's it—the electric chair. That's what scared the bad men."

"Why there's a dead chap up in number 12 right now, but nobody'll touch him—afraid of the spirit. I'll have to buy him out myself. When they want a doctor they come to me and I have to call him. When they want—"

At this juncture a Chinese boy came running to Abe, muttering a stream of gibberish. It developed that he had had an argument with a Jewish merchant around the corner. Abe settled the argument and came back to his post. "Know these people pretty well?" he was asked.

"They don't tell you anything until they've known you 25 years. I've been here only ten."

He stretched, yawned again and sauntered up Mott street to a crowd of children who were playing "ring-around-the-rosy" out of the path of a truck.
