SAVING NORWICH LEADS THE STATE FOR LOW VALUATION IN THE TAX LIST

State Tax Commissioner W. H. Blodgett of Manchester, held an informal conference here Thursday morning at 9:30 at the assessors' office in the court house at which he discussed grand lists and taxation methods in general throughout the state. In the course of his remarks he stated that Norwich takes the palm for the state as the town having the lowest valued property in its grand list in proportion to real value and he believes that any town that keeps its grand list low is standing in its own light.

Fair market value, said Commissioner Blodgett, is the legal rate, according to statute, for which property is to be put in the grand list of the towns, and any variations from this are not in accordance with a strict interpretation of the law.

Commissioner Blodgett gave the opinion that the burden of taxation should be lightened on real estate and other personal property owned by small property owners who find it impossible to own property and carry the burden of the present heavy taxation.

Those attending the conference included Mayor H. M. Leroy, the assessors, members of the board of relief, selectmen, tax collector, registrars of voters and Secretary J. J. O'Rourke of the Chamber of Commerce.

STATE COMMERCE CHAMBER MEMBERS MEET SECRETARILY

Secretary George P. Chandler of Commerce Chamber of Commerce met with the members of the state chamber Thursday evening at 6:15 at an informal supper at the Wauregan house while he reported on the progress of the chamber in reference to legislation and other matters.

Secretary Chandler spoke first of the annual meeting which is to be held at Hartford, May 24 and 25, for which he said, a general committee of fifteen with several sub-committees is already at work to make one of the largest and most instructive conventions ever held in Connecticut. It will be a convention of features. He wants every Norwich member to attend the annual meeting if commerce represented by his full list of delegates.

Speaking of the legislative work in which the chamber of commerce has been active, Mr. Chandler said there were 34 different measures which were either supported or opposed when they came before the last legislature and that there were many others which had been introduced by the chamber of commerce committees.

Most important of the legislation was bills relating to the trolley situation in the state and the duties of each town if commerce represented by its full list of delegates.

Since the general assembly adjourned the threatened railroad strike had been one matter upon which the chamber of commerce had taken action and had the state fully organized a motor truck transport system in case the railroad strike had taken place.

The question of American valuation was another matter upon which the chamber took action, securing the sentiment of its members through a referendum vote. There was a large majority for American valuation of the property in the state.

One thing upon which the chamber is now working is the question of stream pollution, a matter of great importance to the system of water power in the state. Representatives of all the interests involved is at work on this problem.

Another committee is at work upon the transportation problem for Connecticut, in order to make it possible to plan by which there shall be more cooperation instead of duplication and waste between railroad, trolley and motor truck transportation.

Those attending the supper were Representative C. V. Pendleton, Commissioner J. J. Donohue, W. H. Blodgett, State Governor Ellis, C. W. Worth, Charles F. Wells, A. Chester Brown, William McNeill, Archibald Mitchell, Jr., and Mr. Sullivan, all members of the state chamber of commerce.
