URGES THINKING FOR FRUIT TREES

The thinning of fruit—apples, peaches and plums—on heavily laden trees has now come to be as much a standard practice as pruning, spraying or cultivating, says one county horticulturist, who advises fruit growers to follow this method. If one has never had an opportunity to observe the results of thinning, especially on apples and peaches, they are due for a pleasant and profitable surprise if they can see it this summer.

On properly thinned apple and peach trees the fruit is much larger, brighter in color, and there is a noticeable greater freedom from insects and disease injury. Given two trees of the same variety, both heavily loaded with fruit, if one is thinned and the other is not thinned, the volume of the crop will be about the same, but the fruit from the thinned tree will grade much higher and will be much more attractive in appearance than that of the unthinned tree, and will usually bring about 50 per cent. more per package in the open market.

Another decided advantage in thinning is that the trees are not injured as much by breakage from the weight of fruit. It is also believed the vitality of the tree is conserved by thinning, since only one-half to one-third the number of seeds are produced, and seed production is a big detaching factor.

Now is the time that thinning of the fruit should be done. Peaches should be thinned so as to stand singly not closer than three to four inches. Apples should be thinned leaving one to a cluster, two to three inches apart. In thinning apples one specimen should be left to each spur, and the distance from the point of attachment at one spur-end to the other should not be less than six inches.

RAINY WEATHER HITS CLOVER CROP
Last week's rainy weather delayed the cutting of clover, though the crop has been ready in some places to cut for a week. Just as soon as settled weather comes, clover should be cut.

Caring clover in such a way as to preserve all the food value is important. The leaves contain the most food, consequently care must be taken to keep the leaves on the stalk. If the clover gets wet before it is half cured, the leaves will fall off, and much of the crop will be lost in the fields when the clover is harvested.

Clover straw is a poor food when it is as dry as to get clover hay into the barn. Sometimes, too, the farmer gets the idea that clover does not make as much milk as timothy, and consequently the crop does not get the attention it deserves.

One of the best ways to prevent leaves from breaking off in harvesting clover is to handle the crop in the following manner: Mow the clover as soon as the dew is off the grass in the morning. Two hours later go through with a roller or forks and keep it going until the latter part of the afternoon. This allows the air to reach the clover and dry it out. Then if the clover can be raked up this should be done and the clover cooked up. If hay caps are available they should be used.

The clover should be allowed to stand in the field for two or three days. Then the clover is opened up or the cocks tipped over to allow the air to reach any moisture resulting from sweating. Then the clover is ready for the barn.

CHICKS REQUIRE ROOM AND FOOD
Growing chicks require plenty of room to run and plenty of green feed. Otherwise, if quarters are cramped and no green feed is available, the flock will appear pale, white-livered and emaciated.

It is safe to say that if green feed is not made available to a flock, at least half the birds will be stunted in growth.

The cock should be allowed to stand in the field for two or three days. Then the clover is opened up or the cocks tipped over to allow the air to reach any moisture resulting from sweating. Then the clover is ready for the barn.

LET'S HAVE RAIN TODAY!
The dance given in Chesterfield last Thursday evening was greatly enjoyed by all.

Austin Rix was a recent visitor here. Miss Bertha Tinker of Williamsburg is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Matt A. Tinker.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Coffey and son Roger were recent callers in New London.

Mr. and Mrs. George Waters and daughter Jessie were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Smith.

LET'S HAVE RAIN TODAY!
Farmington — Warden George N. Farham has presented a petition to the selectmen to call a special town meeting to act on the matter of a new charter for the town and borough of Torrington.

EVERY DAY, IN ADDITION TO PLANTING OF CHARCOAL, GRIT AND CLEAN, COLD WATER, RENEWED TWICE A DAY, BEGINS WHERE THE BIRDS CAN REACH THEM. MILK IS ESPECIALLY NECESSARY IF GREEN FOODS ARE NOT AVAILABLE. IF BIRD MILK AND GREEN FEEDS ARE LACKING, THE FLOCK WILL BECOME RUN DOWN AS DESCRIBED.

It is the lack of proper foods which causes birds to "pick" one another. In some flocks in the county the county agent has found this habit is causing quite some trouble.

SUMMER ACTIVITIES AT CONN. AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE

The plans for the summer at the Connecticut Agricultural College include many activities. Farmers' week and junior short courses the first two weeks in August are established features that draw increasing numbers each year. At least 1,500 people were in Storrs in 1921 during these busy weeks.

This summer the college is inaugurating a new series of practical short-courses during July—all arranged for students in action and service and planned to help with the real problems that rural people are facing.

These courses, for which there are no entrance requirements and which have no relation to degree or diploma, are for poultrymen, housewives, housewives and rural religious workers.

The college has an enviable reputation in the poultry instruction and a three weeks' course has been inaugurated for those who are commercial poultrymen on either a large or a small scale. This course is divided into three separate units, each of which can be elected separately. The first week will be devoted to incubation, brooding and rearing; the second to feeding, housing, marketing and marketing. Experts from outside will be called in to present certain special topics in order to make the course complete. A large amount of time will be devoted to practical work in the yards and houses.

A second new course is that for rural religious workers in which for two weeks the fundamental problems in agriculture and in methods of community work will be discussed by experts and successful leaders in rural life. In association with this course will be two series of lectures on religious lessons to be drawn from the Prophets and the New Testament. These lectures are given under the auspices of the Connecticut Federation of Churches. This is the first time that such a school for rural religious workers has been arranged in the state.

The course for home makers and community leaders is a development and expansion of the courses that have been given at different times during the past five years. While the courses offered are practical and are directed under the headings community problems, health and welfare, clothing and food, students are also eligible to enter the allied courses in agriculture and religious study.

The course for beekeepers is a repetition of a course that has proved helpful in the past and for which the continuing interest in beekeeping maintains a demand.

When the king of Siam is attired in his full complement of royal robes and is wearing all his state decorations their value amounts to something like $1,000,000.

The extraordinary durability of the ancient Egyptian mummy cloth is believed to be due to the fact that it was finished with a vegetable lime derived from the African locust bean tree.

It is asserted that there are in Constantinople representatives of every nation and every tribe upon the globe, and that every language is spoken. It is common to see signs written in eight or nine different languages on the fronts of the retail shops.

An engineering curiosity, said to be unique to this country and to have only one parallel in Europe, is the pipe arch bridge over the Sudbury river which carries Boston's water supply. The span is eighty feet, and the steel pipe arch and one-half feet in diameter, rises five and one-half feet above the horizontal at the center. The pressure on the abutments when the pipe is filled with water is great, and is resisted by a mass of concrete forty feet thick behind each abutment. Across the curved top runs a hand-railed foot bridge. The steel of the pipe in the archway portion is two-thirds of an inch in thickness.
