POETRY

RECOMPENSE
We are quite sure
That we've given them back—bright,
Pure, and beautiful—
We know he will but keep
Our own and his until we fall asleep,
We know he does not mean
To break the sacred reaching between
The Here and There,
He does not mean though heaven be
Far—
To change his spirit entering there, that they love
The eyes that look and wait,
The first to smile for prayer,
The eyes that see,
The spirit when he gave and made
The glorified so new
The eyes that see far to me and you,
I do believe
They will receive
The eyes that see far to me and you,
I do believe
To meet us, that when most I would grow
Far—
I just begin to think about that gladness
And the day
When they shall tell us all about the way
That they have learned to go—
Heaven's pathway show
I do believe the eyes that see far to me,
But glorified, by visiting in the place
Where we shall meet, it only if An occasion worthy that eye and I do believe that God will give a sweet surprise
To tear stained, addered eyes,
And that his heaven will be
More glad, more glad through with joy
For you and me,
As we have loved most, when we shall wake,
I am quite sure, we will be very glad
That for a little while we were so sad.

WHEN THE CROWS FLY HOME
The sweetest of all hours
Are those devoted to them,
When night's broad shadow lowers
O'er fields and woodland bowers,
As to their homes they go,
The crows fly home.

When winter's snows were lying
And the snows of winter were lying,
And the snows of winter were lying,
The crows flew home.

As summer's shining beacons
From clouds to sunny foam,
My memories of the transient,
The crows flew home.

And when I am turning
From lands where now I roam,
From lands where now I roam,
The crows flew home.
