

"DEACON" SCOTT PITCHES GIANTS TO SHUTOUT VICTORY IN THIRD GAME

Scott, Once a Discard and a "Has Beer," Proved to be the Greatest of Them All and All Fandom Pays Tribute—Hoyt, the "Boy Wonder," Fails to Come Up to the Expectations of His Manager—Frisch and Groh Prove to be the Heroes Again in the Third Game—Ruth Boomed Several Times by the Crowd—Record Crowd See the Game—Mays Against McQuillan Today.

New York, Oct. 6.—(By the A. P.)—A little more than three months ago John William Scott dropped out of the baseball box score and no tears—save possibly his own—were shed. Jack had never ranked with those whose names are passed on. A hard-working plodder had just worn out and was expected to fade away. Tonight he is the most talked-of man in the United States.

He transformed himself today and became an identity by pitching 112 balls, that resulted in his team, the New York Giants, defeating the New York Yankees, 3 to 0, in the third game of the world's series, and supplied his club with a two-game lead in the classic, an advantage that has been overcome only once in history.

Nearer to having been a "never was" than a "has been," in cold fact, a discard, cast-off, a useless ball player, Jack Scott was wheeled out of the baseball world by the Cincinnati club last July. He had gone to Cincinnati in a trade with Boston last December but didn't make good. His arm was dead. He was through.

A creditable story travelled among the 27,620 fans who occupied every possible bit of space at the Polo Grounds today. Scott, after his Cincinnati dismissal sought a chance with Manager McGraw, who needed pitchers more than any man in the baseball world. But he needed good ones. According to his story, McGraw, desperate, took a chance, and had Scott's arm treated by a specialist and it helped some—just "some." Scott won eight out of ten games but still he was rated low.

McGraw in Distress Today John Joseph McGraw, famed for his decisiveness, instantaneousness and persistence, led his team out on the field with his mind open and anxious to be closed. McGraw was in distress. His face betrayed his anxiety as he watched his men go through their paces. Their faces, too, mirrored their manager's feeling. Came the time for the pitchers to get ready for some one, anyone, to "warm up."

Bill McGraw pondered. With the final time for a decision approaching dangerously near the "Napoleon of Baseball" nodded silently to Hugh McQuillan to "warm up." Word was sent to the press box that the assignment had been made and the wires buzzed. Temporarily relieved, the manager watched his selection swirl a few balls. But only for a moment.

McGraw Makes His Choice McGraw didn't like McQuillan's form. He turned to Scott, sitting on the bench and with the air of a man who is resting all his hopes on a broken reed, ordered him to replace McQuillan. It was almost unprecedented for a manager to change his choice in so important a matter at such a time.

Everyone knew that Walter Hoyt, the "boy wonder," who won two out of three games from the Giants in the 1921 series, striking out 18 men, allowing only 18 hits, and yielding only two runs, both measured, was the ace of the Yankees. One fan remarked that McGraw virtually was conceding the game, believing Hoyt unbeatable, and had decided not to throw away a man who might win tomorrow.

Jack Scott's record is in the books now. It says there that the cast-off's pitching was so marvelous that the Giant outfielders only made six put-outs—that the Yankees were so thoroughly subdued that eighteen out of their twenty-four outs were of the easy infield variety. Only four hits were made by the Yankees, with their outfielders' "defenders' row," and only six times did they get a man on first.

On the mound, facing 40,000 pairs of critical eyes, listening to the blasts of the mighty shouts Scott was the incarnation of earnestness, faith and hope, but he never smiled. He remained inscrutably calm and cool.

Smith Trades Scott Jack Scott combined his head and his aging right arm today—and he followed.

grounding out to Bancroft. The Yankees got but two hits off Scott in the other eight innings, one in the second by Pipp, who also stole second, and another in the sixth by Hoyt. Both were the first to face Scott, who quickly retired the next three batters each time.

Witt, who walked in the third, and Ruth, who was hit by a pitched ball in the fourth, were the only other Yankees to reach base. Whitey, napping off first base, was caught by Earl Smith's quick toss to Kelly, and the first "bomber" play of the series was automatically recorded. The Babe was cut down at third when he crashed into Groh in trying to get an extra base. Frisch's fumble of Meusel's fielder.

Giants Excel in the Field In the other departments of the game the Giants excelled in fielding, although there was little of the spectacular variety. Groh's running catch of Scott's foul near the Yankee dugout, in the fifth, and Bancroft's spear of Pipp's hot grounder over second base, in the ninth, were outstanding.

The Giants, with two victories and no defeats, now hold a formidable advantage over their rivals. Their supremacy in pitching, generalship, and all-round defensive and offensive work, while especially clear-cut today, has been outstanding in the entire series to date.

A Startling Reversal Few more startling reversals of form have been recorded in the fortunes of the rival twirling stars. Huggins, with five starts to rely on, was conceded an overwhelming advantage. McGraw, on the other hand, with a staff riddled and ineffective by a hard campaign, faced a dubious outlook with the chance that one or more of his moundmen might come through. That they did come through—Nehf and Barnes and Scott—displayed more pitching skill, resourcefulness and courage than Bush, Shawkey and Hoyt, is the sensation of the series.

A Record Attendance The official attendance and receipts for the third game which follow, show a new gate receipt record for a single day: Paid attendance, 37,620. Receipts $122,354. Players' share $63,400.54. Each club's share $29,939.18. Commissioner's share $13,522.10.

(Special to the Bulletin) Willimantic, Oct. 6.—Manager John P. Meola, who has organized what undoubtedly will prove to be the most important and fastest aggregation to represent the American Thread A. A. in their game Sunday afternoon with the Norwich Saxons at Recreation Park, this semi-professional team was secured at great expense and it is hoped that the fans will turn out in large numbers to see a top-notch contest.

Callahan whose backstopping made a hit here last Sunday will appear again Sunday. He is from the Albany club of the Eastern League. Rollie Naylor hurler for Connie Mack's Athletics of Philadelphia will do the winning against Fortune, who will twirl for Norwich.

Babe Adams, the only local player, will appear on first base. Sherry Long of Waterbury, who made a fine showing here last Sunday against the Manchester team, will hold third base. Brick Kane will cover left field. Kane is an output of the Hartford club and played here with the Fisk Red Taps in their first game. Kane is batting over the 300 mark. McGowan of the Philadelphia Athletics will be on hand as center fielder. Tom Connolly of the Rochester International League will stop things coming his way out in right field.

Arrangements have been made by our active manager John McQuillan to have a radio installed in the grandstand so that the spectators at the game can hear the results of the world series contest.

HAGEN BEATS SARAZEN IN FIRST HALF OF MATCH

Pittsburgh, Pa., Oct.—(By the A. P.)—The magic in the putting ring of Walter Hagen was two holes more powerful today than the golf-wizardry of Eugene Sarazen—the boy monarch of American professionals.

The first half of their 72 special match was witnessed by the greatest crowd that ever trod the course at Oakmont, and the two champions will start the final 36 holes tomorrow on the Westchester-Baltimore course at Rye, N. Y. with Hagen two up.

This world's series between Hagen, holder of the British open crown, and the 21-year-old Pittsburgh professional champion, was responsible for scenes never before witnessed on the Oakmont course. Sarazen fought an up-hill battle all day chiefly because his putting was erratic but the great gallery cheered him until the 36th hole was played off.

Par for the course is 74. Gene and Walter shot the 36 holes in 150 each. Both champions have beaten par at Oakmont that ever trod the course at Oakmont, and the gallery would have been thrilled more frequently if the medal scores had been lower.

Sarazen surprised many of his supporters by driving as effectively as Hagen. King Gene often took spectacular chances to get on the green but when he and King Walter had to settle the issue with their putters, the British open champion invariably had the edge.

When the match was finished, the smiling Hagen received an ovation but as Sarazen walked to the clubhouse, there were cries: "You'll come back tomorrow—Gene old boy." Sarazen and Hagen left for New York tonight. The course at Rye is familiar to both players. It is only a short distance from the childhood home of Sarazen, who was a caddy there four year ago.

SPORT NOTES

A new World's Series hero broke into the hall of fame yesterday. He was Jack Scott who let the Yanks down with only four hits and not the semblance of a run.

Walter Hoyt, "the boy wonder," was no puzzle to the hard hitting Giants and he was handed from the bench to allow Sam Jones to finish the battle.

Ross Young led the Giant attack with three safe hits out of four times at bat with Heinie Groh and Frankie Frisch tied with two each.

The fans who saw yesterday's game had no complaint about getting a chance to the finish—the finish of the Yankee hopes.

The name Smith must be a hoodoo for both Yanks and Giants for in the past three games a Smith has been sent in as a pinch-hitter and failed.

McGraw made a wise last-minute move in sending in Scott instead of Hugh McQuillan as Scott proved to be invincible.

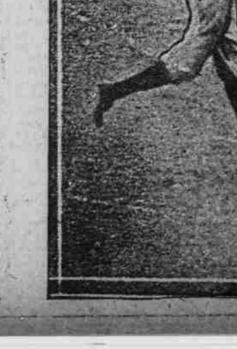

It is easy to see the handwriting on the wall when it comes to Babe Ruth. The one time idol of fandom is fast slipping from his pedestal and Frankie Frisch is taking his place. Ruth was booted several times yesterday.

The result of the game yesterday has changed the odds in the betting on the series.

The bird that said Jack Scott was a second rate pitcher that a shoboner is a musical instrument.

On Sunday the result of the game will be bulletined on the blackboard in the Bulletin office window.

McGRAW GIVES ALL CREDIT TO "DEACON" SCOTT

New York, Oct. 6.—(By the A. P.)—The perfect control of John Scott, curve ball pitcher, who several months ago was thrown into baseball's discard, was the outstanding feature of the third game of the World series according to McGraw and Huggins, managers of the Giants and Yankees.

McGraw considered the best judge of pitching ability in baseball, who picked up Scott, a cast-off, in mid-season, said he knew the "Deacon" had plenty of stuff, but that his control was a thing to marvel at.

"Catcher Earl Smith told me," said McGraw, "that not once during the game did Scott fail to put the ball where he wanted it. His curves were breaking perfectly and after a couple of innings I just let him and Smith work as they pleased."

"I thought that our team should have counted more runs on their hits, but with Scott's pitching that didn't matter. We won and the credit is all Scott's." Huggins, the Yankees' leader, also praised the Giant pitcher's work.

"We thought," he said, "that Scott would be easy for us, but his control was too good. I think that the error credited Ward lost the game for us. It was a bad ball and Ward was hardly to blame for kicking it, but that was one of the 'breaks'."

Huggins said he would start Mays in tomorrow's game and McGraw, who now can afford to take a chance, is to have McQuillan and Ryan ready.
