New York, Oct. 8.—(By the A. P.)—The New York Giants once more are champions of the world. They reached that pinnacle of success for the second consecutive year in a furious uphill rush this afternoon that flung the Yankees to defeat, 5 to 3, and crushed a disgusted pitcher, Bullet Joe Bush.

It was the second successive time that the Yankees have bucked the Giants in a world's series and failed. This year they went down ignominiously, without the solace of having captured even one of the five games that comprised the battle for the title. The best the Yankees could do was to win the second game of the series. The Giants won the other four.

In all the annals of the game only two clubs ever triumphed in a world series in such a decisive fashion. In 1907 the Chicago Nationals won four straight victories over the Detroit Americans after fighting a twelve inning first game tie at 3-3 in nine. Seven years later the Boston Braves surprised the fans of the entire nation by wrecking Connie Mack's superb Athletics four games in a row.

The final downfall of the Yankees was that of a house momentarily divided. Miller Huggins, the head of the household which was then enjoying a 2 to 2 lead over the Giants in his strategic program for blocking the onslaught of the champions in the eighth inning. Bush became angry, and before he could calm himself, long George Kelly had smacked one of his curves so hard and so far that one Giant reached second base with the run that tied the Yankees and another Giant trotted in with the score that beat them.

The Giants enjoyed the prospect of a victory for fifteen minutes. When they came to bat in the seventh the score was deadlocked at 2 all. They made a run on Merkle's scratch hit, Schang's sacrifice bunt, a wild pitch by Art Nehf, the Giants' south-paw, and a short sacrifice fly to center field from the bat of Everett Scott. The throw-in of this fly almost caught Meusel as he slid for home. It seemed the Yankees barely had squeezed out a victory.

And then in the eighth the courageous Giants flung out their challenge. Pipp, the Yankees' first baseman, bailed them for a moment by stopping Bancroft's hard throw. But Pipp's first base and leaping to the bag just in time to beat the runner. But the fighting Giants would not be denied a victory. They were splendidly exemplified by the diamond square in half with a single that ripped through the turf into center field. Frisch hit a liner that bounded off the Williams' right field, who juggled it, and the batter was credited with a two bagger, while Groh went on to third. Irish Meusel smacked a roller that hit the ball home so fast that Groh could not safely reach the plate. He started to return to third but was run down by Schang.

When the ball was thrown back to the box Bush found himself in trouble. Frisch the fastest runner on either team, stood poised at Huggins' "Let's play baseball." Huggins was insistent, and repeated his signal to pass Young. Bush obeyed. His face showed his disgust at each of the four wild throws he hurled to the catcher. Kelly smacked one on the nose. And then Kelly, who bats right-handed, appeared at the plate. The next first pitch to him was a ball. The next was a speedy curve. It cracked off Kelly's bat and into center field at a fast clip, scoring Frisch and Meusel. Huggins had guessed wrong, Bush perhaps had won a moral victory, but everything else was lost.

Still apparently bereft of his team, Huggins gave his orders. At this moment there popped into the mind of Miller Huggins the thought that the best way out of the difficulty would be to let Young walk to first, filling the bases so that a force out would be facilitated. He was willing to take a chance that Kelly, who has been weak in his recent batting, would continue to be weak. So he ordered Bush to walk Young. Later both Giant and Yankee players said it was splendid example of real inside baseball strategy. The break of the game ruined it nevertheless.

The sudden command plainly displeased Bush. He wanted to work out in his own way. He warmed up his tongue with a couple of hot words and then shouted at Huggins: "Let's play baseball." Huggins was insistent, and repeated his signal to pass Young. Bush obeyed. His face showed his disgust at each of the four wild throws he hurled to the catcher. Kelly smacked one on the nose. And then Kelly, who bats right-handed, appeared at the plate. The next first pitch to him was a ball. The next was a speedy curve. It cracked off Kelly's bat and into center field at a fast clip, scoring Frisch and Meusel. Huggins had guessed wrong, Bush perhaps had won a moral victory, but everything else was lost.

CLUBS LOSE MONEY ON THE SERIES New York, Oct. 8.—Some of the 40,000 persons who trudged out of the Polo Grounds after the last game of the world's series today had a vision of the two sets of club-owners sitting snugly in the counting room, snickering to themselves and calling a moving van to carry away their profits. They were in the counting room and no doubt they were sitting down, puffing on big fat cigars, and a listening to the music of adding machines—but it was about as pleasant to them as a Turkish melody in a Greek restaurant. It is stated unofficially that the club company will get enough checks to pay its expense out of the series, one of the few times that it has happened.

TO THE WITH STONINGTON The Academy eleven battled to a scoreless tie against the Stonington team on Saturday afternoon. The game was hard fought in all four periods and the home team received approximately $41,218, which is generally believed to be less than it cost either club to meet its world series obligations. Compared to the $18,037 that each operating combination took in its coffers last year it looks like a bankruptcy sale.

CLOSED CAR DEMAND HIGH Mounting Percentage of Closed Car Production Reported by Makers. Production schedules prepared by the motor car manufacturers for the coming year reflect accurately the constantly increasing desire of the public for closed car comfort.

The strength of the closed car demand is illustrated by the fact that Dodge Brothers, Detroit manufacturer, are planning to devote approximately 35 per cent of their large production for the latter half of 1922 to construction of closed cars. The importance of this figure is emphasized by comparison with last year's closed car percentage, which was approximately 12 per cent.

The production schedule shows that the closed car of today is distinctly not a "luxury" car. It is in great demand because it will stand up under hard driving and pounding on bad roads just as sturdily as the open car—and at the same time offer closed car protection and comfort. The steel body construction which Dodge Brothers recently introduced in their Business Coupe and Business Sedan provides strength and resistance to strain which is possible only where the construction is made of steel. And prior of closed cars can be no means be thought of as prohibitive, as they might have been years ago. The prices of Dodge Brothers all-steel closed cars, for example, now exceed the prices of the open cars by narrow margins of $100 to $200.

In the northern and eastern states, where from five to seven months of the year are too cold for comfortable driving in an open car, the popularity of the closed car is growing by leaps and bounds. Even in the south, the buying public appreciates the instant protection against rain or inclement weather which this type affords. The rapidly mounting percentage of closed car production shows how well the motor public is taking to this type of car.
