NOT THE REALITY OF THE CASE

Clifford Hayes, Aged 19, Held in Somerset County Jail, Charged With First Degree Murder—Accuser is Raymond Schneider, a Companion, Who Declares That Hayes Thought He Was Shooting a Girl Who Had Rejected Schneider—There Are Discrepancies in Statements Made by the Accuser.

New Brunswick, N. J., Oct. 9.—(By the A. P.)—Clifford Hayes, a youth of nineteen, was held incommunicado in the Somerset county jail at Somerville tonight on a warrant charging him with the first degree murder of the Rev. Edward Wheeler Hall and Mrs. Eleanor Reinhardt Mills, on September 14.

But if the authorities who caused his arrest have any evidence against him, they have carefully withheld it.

The explanation of Raymond Schneider, 23, whose accusation caused Hayes' arrest, was that it was a case of mistaken identity, he said, though he admitted he was shooting 15-year-old Pearl Bahrmer and her step-father, Nicholas Bahrmer.

But the only motive he advanced for the crime was a sort of Quixotism on Hayes' part—a desire to right a supposed wrong done to a friend, Schneider, who, although married, admits he is in love with Pearl.

Hayes' retort was that Schneider was "a damned liar." He added that he had deserted Phillips' farm, where the bodies were found, in search of Pearl and her stepfather.

They heard about the crabbie tree from where the shots seemed to come, observing an automobile dash away as they ran.

Beneath the tree, he declared, they found the minister and the choir singer dead and—besides—Schneider bent down and took the minister's watch, which Schneider had dropped during the all-night grilling in which both youths were subjected. He in turn, accused Hayes of committing the murder.

Hayes' explanation of the discrepancies in Schneider's story is his assertion that neither he nor Hayes touched the bodies of the minister and the choir singer, which he has established by a belated autopsy that Mrs. Mills' throat was cut from ear to ear and broken at the neck.

Schneider could not explain this. Neither could he explain how the bodies came to be found on the Phillips farm.

He was equally unsatisfactory as to how the love letters written by Mrs. Mills to the minister came to be scattered about the grounds, he proposed one of the minister's cards against the sole of his shoe, as if to make sure of identification.

His story does tally remarkably, however with the first statement attributed to Mrs. Hall after the murders were discovered—that her theory of the crime was that of a "mistaken identity."

This statement later was repudiated by Miss Sally Peters, confidante of Mrs. Hall, who said the rector's widow could imagine no motive, except possibly that of robbery, for the murder.

Although they openly expressed confidence that the case had been practically solved, the youths were still heard at work tonight trying to reconstruct all the tangled bits of evidence with Schneider's story—or to batter him down.

Parties gathered at a street corner, she said and the three youths followed her. They had walked some distance she said, she became tired and wanted to return home, but her step-father would not let her and insisted that she continue.

She began to cry, she said, and the trio rushed up, Schneider doffing his coat and expressing his determination to beat Bahrmer.

The encounter ended without blows, however she said, and she and her step-father returned home.

Schneider's story tallies with her's perfectly up to this point, except that Schneider said Pearl and Bahrmer walked on the Phillips farm.

Kauffman left them then, he said, but he and Hayes determined to follow on. Hayes showing him a 22 calibre pistol and assuring him there was no danger.

Suddenly, he said, they saw a couple beneath the crab apple tree and Hayes whipped out his pistol and began to fire. The three youths fled.

After the struggles of the pair beneath the tree were stilled, he said, he stole forward, struck a match and cried to Hayes:

"My God, man, you've made a terrible mistake."

Hayes then snatched the minister's watch and Hayes' pistol.

Schneider was quoted as telling the authorities he had taken Pearl to the scene on Saturday—two days after the shooting—partly out of morbid curiosity and partly because he wanted to show her how nearly she had come to being slain for her walk with her step-father.

It was Schneider and Pearl who first "discovered" the bodies and notified the police.

Pearl's version to the reporters today was somewhat different.

"Raymond saw me Saturday and insisted that we take a walk," she said. "He took me up De-Russy lane. It was the first time we had ever been up that way. We sat down in the grass near an apple tree to talk. I looked over and saw the bodies and said to Raymond, 'There are two people lying down.'"

"Why don't you attend to your own business?" he replied.

"Then I walked over and saw they were all bloody and ran away frightened. Then we told a policeman."

The girl said Schneider had appeared worried ever since the shooting, and on two occasions had asked her to go to Perth Amboy with him.

"Did you know Raymond had a pearl-handled knife in his pocket that night?" Pearl also showed reporters a note she had received from Schneider's young wife on the Monday following the finding of the bodies. It read:
