

STOCK MARKET WAS ACTIVE

New York, Oct. 23.—Material recessions in quoted values took place in today's active stock market, which was featured by a heavy speculative selling movement founded on the belief that the recent upward swing had been overdone. The market's efforts little rested on selling pressure until prices had fallen 3 to 5 points below Saturday's closing figures.

Profit-taking and the touching off of "stop-loss" orders accelerated the decline, which extended over most of the day but was particularly acute among high priced industrial shares, which profited extensively by stock dividends and rumors of the same. Speculative selling for the decline obviously was based on the rumors of the same. Speculative selling for and doubtless obviously was based on the theory that a number of industrial stocks already had discounted all the reasonable business expansion that could be expected for some time to come and that number of those were out of line with the rest of the list.

While there were no outside news developments likely to materially change the business outlook, the first selling pressure today was directed against the shipping shares on announcement of the local federal district court's decision upholding the United States treasury's ruling on liquor transportation. Motor shares were next subjected to attack, apparently without special reason. While the industry was run into a period of reasonable dullness, production is still well above last year and reports of sales encouraging. The success of these attacks, however, encouraged the bears and they extended their activities to other groups, being aided by considerable profit-taking recommended by some of the larger commission houses.

The most violent fluctuations took place in the high priced oil shares. Mexican Petroleum gave another sensational performance, establishing a new high at 25 1/2 soon after the opening, dropping to 22 1/2 during the middle of the day, and then recovering to 24 1/2 by the close. Standard Oil of New Jersey moved within a 4 point radius and closed 1 1/2 lower, and losses of 1 to 2 1/4 points also took place in Pan-American A and B. Producers and Refiners, Standard Oil of California and Houston, and Equipment stocks were hard hit despite the fact that the large orders are still coming into the big companies and that a number of repair jobs have been referred to them. The latter group advanced 4 points while American Locomotive, Pullman and American Car were off 3 to 3 1/2 points.

Indications that the September earnings of railroads this week will show a material improvement over those of last month failed to halt the reaction in dividend paying railroads although they showed more stubborn resistance than most any other group of standard shares. Central of New Jersey registered a net gain of 17 points but the other shares were unable to hold the gains made in a brief flurry of buying. Reading dropped back 1 5/8 points below Saturday's close. Norfolk and Western was strong.

U. S. Steel common sold off 1 3/4 points. Other weak spots were Studebaker, Corn Products, American Can, Consolidated Gas, International Harvester, National Lead, Postum Cereal, United States Alcohol, Remington Typewriter and Old Dominion, the losses ranging from 1 1/2 to 5 points.

Call money is steady at 4 1/2 per cent. There was plenty of demand for this money at 3 1/4 for the longer maturities but bankers were demanding 5 per cent. Commercial paper showed a somewhat firmer tone.

Heavy selling of the currencies of continental allies in the London and local markets was the feature of the foreign exchange market. French francs established a low record for the year at 7.10 cents, a decline of 22 points below Saturday's price. Sterling was strong and held up to 14.44 1/2 cents in heavy offering of cotton and grain bills.

FEDERAL AUTHORITIES DROP ACTION IN POTTER CIDER CASE AT GRISWOLD

(Special to The Bulletin.) Jewett City, Oct. 23.—After a number of delays and unprecedented complications, the last chapter in the famous Griswold cider case is being written. For more than five months the newspapers from coast to coast have aired out and published the legal proceedings concerning the case. A representative of a vineyard firm was in Jewett City today and after taking samples from local chemical tests were made. John Potter has sold his 125 barrels of vinegar. They were rented at once, and under the direct custody of a government prohibition officer they will be escorted over the state line of Connecticut. Mr. Potter did not expect, and did not receive, anything like the full value of the cider, which when it was first confiscated by the state police was worth from $35 to $40 per barrel.

The detailed facts of the case are of more than passing interest. At a trial before the jury in the Griswold town court (following the proceedings in criminal action at an earlier session of the same court, in which the defendant was found guilty by Judge Arthur W. Brown) the barrels of vinegar were turned back to Mr. Potter. At this time the jury claimed that there was not sufficient evidence produced by the prosecution for them to order it destroyed. At this point federal authorities took a hand in the game and United States deputy marshals came here and locked up the cider under the seal of the federal government.

It now appears that the action of the federal government was made and carried out on account of sundry false reports and statements which were reported to the late Philip W. Flynn, the federal officer in charge. It was reported to him that the cider had been turned back to Mr. Potter by a jury that might possibly have been "fixed" to render a decision in favor of the defendant. Later, and upon investigation, and when becoming acquainted with the real facts in the case, the federal officers learned that instead of being a suborned jury they were as far the other way, and were avowed prohibition men and inclined, if anything, to favor a ruling against the defendant.

With this positive information in their hands, the whole complexion of the case was changed in the eyes of the federal officers. As it stands today, the government doesn't want cider, or whatever it might be now that has been turned back to its owner by a jury of his peers. The main thing is to get it out of the town house cellar.

JEWETT CITY

At the public meeting of the Red Cross chapter Wednesday evening, reports of the work of the chapter during the past week will be given. To many people Red Cross work meant only war time activity. What is being done and will be done by the American Red Cross in the Near East here will be given in the report of the delegate to the national convention held in Washington, D. C., two weeks ago.
