POETRY

FROM MY ARMCHAIR.
Am I a king, that should call my own
This splendid world, that I have won
Or by what means, or what right divine
Can I proclaim a mine?
Only, perhaps, the right divine of song
It may be so, but I am wrong
Only because the glowing chestnut tree
Of old was sung by me.
Well I remember that all its branches
When the still breeze through its branches made
A cavern of cool shade.
There, by the blacksmith's forge, beside
The stream, the blossoms white and red,
Enticed the bee, and it seemed alive,
And murmured like a bee.
And when the wind of autumn, with a shout,
Tossed its great arms about,
The shining chestnuts burning from the earth,
Dropped to the ground beneath.
And now some fragments of its branches have Shaped as a staff, when Have by my brother's hand a home at last,
And whistler of the past.
The Danish king could not in all his pride
Repeat the ocean side,
But, seated in my chair, I can in rhyme
Roll back the tide of Time.
I see again, as one in vision seen,
The blossoms white and red,
And here the children's voices shout and call,
And the brown chestnuts fall.
I see the smile with its fragrant glow,
I hear the bellows blow,
I hear the miller's wheel, the miller's beat,
The iron wheel with
And thus, dear children, have you made for me
This day a gift.
And to me more than threescore years
and ten
Brought back my youth again.
The heart hath its own memory, like the mind,
And in it are enshrined
The precious memories, into which is wrought
The giver's loving thought.
Only your love and your remembrance could Give life to this dead wood,
And make the heart, that's now
Blossom again in song.
—Henry Wadsworth Longfellow.

NORTHERN PINES.

If there is rank in growth things,
I think that these must all be Kings!
Legions on legions, loved of sun,
And starlight when the day is done.
Who have, to usher in the spring,
A host of merry songs, to cheer the
Who make, when winter breaks, a
A fellowship with ice and snow.
Once these were food for swain eyes—
That make a meadow of the sky,
And likewise they will have the day
When you and I are joined again.
Then may I make my final bed
Beneath a pine's uplifted head;
And I will know that love has sent
No more majestic monument.
—Harry Philip, in New York Sun.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

"I'm about ready to quit," growled the old-fashioned politician.
"What's wrong?"
"The party boss has ordered me to go out and see what I can do with the the livestock vote. The only thing I know somebody will be calling me down at campaign headquarters for shaving the back of my neck."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

refuses to give his address. Where do you live?
Prisoner—Me? Across the way from him, your honor.—Boston Transcript.
The confessor, producing eggs from a top hat, addressed a boy in the front row.
"Your mother can't get eggs without hens, now, can she?" he asked.
"Oh, yes," said the boy.
"How's that?" said the confessor.
"She keeps ducks," answered the boy.—

"American citizens don't seem to have much respect for their congress," remarked the foreign visitor.
"If you could see the way some of the members carry on," said Senator Shortworthy, "you'd think they didn't have much respect for it themselves."— Birmingham Age-Herald.

"Flubdub says he doesn't know what whiskey tastes like."
"Must be a good deal of those fellows that started drinking after the passing of the Volstead act."—Judge.
