We hardly yet have become accustomed to the wonders of the Atlantic Cable. Yesterday at 1 o'clock p. m. we were in receipt of dispatches of the same day from Berlin, Vienna, and London.

We give on the second page our usual Religious Miscellany, which will be found interesting to all readers.

Bad News for the Democracy. The President is reported to have said yesterday that he was not disposed to make further removals from office on account of politics.

Another Failure. The Courier announces, "with regret," suspension of the Democratic Review, "owing to the political aspect of the times."

Consoling. Yesterday's Courier has a ponderous article on the very dubious question, "How now stands the Democratic party?" It is the general opinion that the party was pretty completely floored at the late elections, and hardly had strength enough to stand at all.

The Markets. Yesterday was a blue day in the commercial centres. Gold touched 142 1/2 in New York. Cotton declined 1 to 1 1/2. Dry Goods in sympathy were lower and holders anxious to dispose of stocks. Groceries are weak. Breadstuffs are all tending downward. Provisions had the same tendency. The general tenor is "irregular, dull, and lower."

The Sabbath. There is no institution of society whose influence is more decided or beneficial than the Sabbath. It affects us socially, physically, intellectually and spiritually. It has a refining power upon the manners that we can best appreciate when we contrast the rough, sensual, almost brutal man who pursues his usual calling on the Sabbath, who does not dress for the day of rest, does not attend the house of God, does not even spend the day in social intercourse with his friends, when we contrast him with the man who "Remembers the Sabbath day to keep it holy." Even to those who keep this day only as a holiday it brings manifold blessings. The unselfishness of friendly intercourse, the refinement of a better dress—for neat and tasteful dress is refining—the stimulus to thought which conversation gives, all these are elevating results. Physically, it blesses with a needed rest that prolongs life, increases the power of endurance, and promotes in a high degree bodily health. Intellectually, it furnishes time for reading, reflection, hearing sermons and addresses that furnish mental food for the week to come. Spiritually, with its lull in labor, its closed stores, and shops, and offices, the boiling cauldron of trade stilled, it brings a season when man may think of God, and moral accountability, and the future, and hear more distinctly the voice of Conscience, too often drowned by the clamor of the world, through the busy days of the week.

Let every business man, every clerk, and every laborer, avail themselves of the obvious advantages held out to them by the Sabbath. Don't sleep away the bright morning hours, and then lounge torpidly all day in your home, like a grizzly bear in winter; but array yourself for the holy festival of the Sabbath, go out with family or friends, as your neighbors are doing, to the Sabbath School and Church Service. Let your heart expand with the swelling melody of the sacred music, and ascend to God with the incense of prayer, and be quickened to see and feel its religious obligations by the truths that are taught from its sacred desk. Our churches are open to all, and all will be better, in every respect, by attendance upon their services. The Sabbath is the great barrier that prevents us from lapsing into heathenism. He who ignores it will become heathenish.

A Hard Lick. Poor JOHNSON! Deprived of his veto—threatened with impeachment—mad with himself, and nearly every body mad at him, it was hard for the Chicago Times to give him the following kick:

In the first place we must cut loose from the administration of Andrew Johnson, and leave the hybrid concern to float on the sea of public contempt into which it some time since entered, and from which no power can rescue it.

The Negro Suffrage Question. We find the following as the closing paragraph from a long article in the Cincinnati Commercial, which is quite significant coming from that paper:

The great question grows as upon every side and insists upon decision, whether suffrage shall in this Republic be restricted or extended—whether we shall turn backward or go forward in this matter of government by the people, and for the people—whether certain races or classes shall be excluded from the elective franchise, or whether the test of the right of suffrage shall be manhood. Clearly, we must go on; and every hour's experience tells us that a disfranchising race; or class or section, is a disturbing element, and suggests the wisdom of Statesmanship that would rid us of it forever.

We clip the following special dispatches from an exchange. The question is making quite a commotion in the Democratic party, and while the most of the organs of that party take issue with the Chicago Times, there appears to be a strong sentiment possessing the minds of the leaders that some new policy must be adopted to preserve the life and vitality of the defeated and disorganized party:

WASHINGTON, November 15. THE NEW MOVEMENT IN FAVOR OF IMPARTIAL SUFFRAGE. The movement of leading Democratic papers in the East and West in favor of impartial suffrage, has caused a decided sensation in Washington, especially among officials and Southern men. The latter declare that the South will accept impartial suffrage in preference to ratifying the Constitutional Amendment. A well known New Orleans editor, now here, favors it, and Hon. W. H. Truett, of South Carolina, who was an officer of the Confederate Government, and formerly Assistant Secretary of State under Buchanan, arrived here to-day, and says South Carolina prefers it to the Amendment. It is rumored to-night that the President will recommend universal amnesty for impartial suffrage, in his forthcoming message.

NEW YORK, November 15. THE WORLD ON THE CHICAGO TIMES' MOVEMENT. The recent article in the Chicago Times, concerning the future of the Democratic party, excites general comment. The World this morning counsels the Southern States to offer some sort of an amendment of their own. It says:

We believe that the true way out of the present difficulty is by the spontaneous action of the South itself. When the Southern States have all rejected the amendment, as they certainly will, and have thereby demonstrated that they are masters of the situation, so far as that measure is concerned, we trust that they will, by some method of joint action, make a counter proposition.

Late Bounty Decisions. It has been decided by the Government authorities that enlisted men who were discharged to accept commissions as volunteer officers, though they may have served a period of two years of the full three year's term of service, are excluded from participation in the benefit of the additional bounty under the law of July 28th, 1866. Drafted men and substitutes are also excluded from the additional bounty.

Notwithstanding the recent decision that soldiers who have lost their discharges cannot establish their claims to the additional bounty, inquiries continue to be received at Washington asking whether some expedient can not be found to make amends for the loss of discharge papers. It should be distinctly understood that the failure to present the discharge with all applications would be a mere waste of time and trouble.

Maryland Congressmen. It is possible that the rejoicings of the Copperheads over the "glorious result in Baltimore," whereby Maryland is said to be "redeemed," may be a little premature, at least so far as the Congressmen are concerned. The Washington Chronicle understands that the Hon. J. L. THOMAS, who was reported as defeated in the 2d district, and Mr. STEWART in the 5th, both intend to contest the seats of the Copperhead candidates. If the half of what we hear about the manner in which the election was conducted in these districts, and indeed all over the State, be true, there is abundant ground for such action. We would not be surprised if the Copperhead victory in Maryland should after all be barren, so far as Congressional gains are concerned.

Worthy of Johnson. "S. K. Hannegan has received his Commission as Inspector of the Seventh District."—Herald.

This is an appointment eminently worthy of the present dispensers of Federal patronage.

Hannegan is a blatant rebel, who was arrested and locked up in the guard house about three years ago, for shouting for Jeff. Davis on the streets of this city.—Indianapolis Journal.

The color bearer of the 22d Wisconsin Volunteers, who had a leg shot off in the fight at Peach Tree Creek, was recently offered the place of Postmaster at Geneva. He promptly refused it, saying: "I lost one leg in the service of my country; I don't propose to sell the other to the enemies of my country, and throw in my principles."

The following poem was read at the meeting of the Army of the Tennessee at Cincinnati on Thursday:

Men of the Tennessee. BY THOMAS BUCHANAN READ. When treason fled from Heaven and found its cell, Chained the great demon; but, as was foretold,

The crawling serpent, cunning as of old, Hid to our Southern Eden, and defiled Earth's sweetest daughter, and her sunniest child;

Languid with luxury, our pampered Eve Leaned to the tongue that could so well deceive, And eating of the ashy apple, fell— And fell—and fell—how very far she fell!

Stooped to her rescue: Men of the Tennessee! Ye stirs of human freedom—overhead Your noble fathers, men have mis-called dead, Gaze from their skyey temples 'mid the stars,

And christen ye the noblest sons of Mars, And on their crystal battlements display Banners with bright inscriptions, where are said Words that forever shall be there unfurled: "We freed the nation—we have freed a world."

Above your deeds, in their celestial glee, The bells of Heaven ring out their jubilee— Men of the Tennessee!

Ring it around the universe, and show The great thought blazing in our Sherman's brow. Where, gazing from his pyre, far below He saw the crawling, rattling human foe, And with his eagle brood which naught could brook,

With flashing wings, like banners, swooped and snatched the traitor from the foe. The old Carolinian curs within his claws, And crushed it into nothing: Without a pang, he died.

Ye tongues of iron ring it far and wide, From all your bellies, Freedom, ring it with pride; Ye silver bells in turlets of the sky, Chiming the thoughts of angels, clear and high,

Ye starry towers where sentinels of God, Stand guardians of the truth—announce abroad The rising sun has struck your rights with gold, And clothed you with his glory—I behold The angel, Time, whom men have misnamed old;

Yet beautiful and bright as at his birth, Writing his names upon the rounded earth, Which like the iron highways yet to be Shall gleamly span all continents; and ye are of the might of the Tennessee!

In the Hesperian gardens of the West, The stars may fall, as on an Autumn night, But these unsetting champions of the North, With all the uncounted nebulae of God, Which justice conjured, and which freedom claims, Are heaped in their orbs of splendor—there they stand. The grace and glory of our native land!

And such are ye, O ye men of the Tennessee! On motion, a vote of thanks was passed for Mr. Read's poem, after which the meeting adjourned, till 10 o'clock this morning.

Brownlow on the Elections. We make the following extract from Governor BROWNLOW's late message to the Tennessee Legislature, embracing his views of the result of the late elections:

The victory was obtained by the Union people over a party consisting of a combination of rebels at the South and traitors at the North, sustained by the power and patronage of the President. As it was decided in the field in the great military struggles, that this nation shall live, so it has been decided at the ballot-box that loyal men alone shall govern it. The great heart of the loyal people is in sympathy with us; and they will require representatives to sustain us against the assaults of rebels at home or the usurpation of an unscrupulous President. The loyal people, in advance of their leaders, have declared that the Government shall not pass into the hands of its enemies, and that the people of the rebellious States, who labored for four years to destroy the Government, shall not be restored to fellowship in the Union without proper guarantees for the future safety of the country. It has been, moreover, determined at the ballot-box in the loyal States that the loyal men North and South shall be protected; that the basis of representation throughout the Union shall be equal; that leading and malignant traitors shall not hold office; that the doors of Congress shall not be opened to blood-stained rebels merely because the President so orders; and, also, that the President has no right to set up a policy in opposition to the policy inaugurated by the representatives of the people—in short, that "traitors shall take back seats," and "treason shall be made odious." Thus the sky brightens to the loyal men of the nation so recently cast down by the afflictions of war. During the dark days of the rebellion their enemies laughed at their calamities. Since peace came, a faithless Executive sought to betray them into the hands of these same enemies. But the right has triumphed. Those great trials and afflictions, which we endured for four years have worked out for the Republic "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory." The late struggle exhibited her immense power and vast resources, and placed her where she will stand throughout recorded time, in the front rank of the naval and military powers of the earth.

Woman's Rights. The returns from the Eighth Congressional District, in New York, are as follows:

Brooks, Democrat, 14,911 Cannon, Republican, 8,087 Mrs. Stanton, Woman's Rights, 8

Mrs. Stanton ought not to be discouraged. It is said "the first shall be last and the last first." She has a large family who will be able to vote soon, and they may bring her out. We should like to know if her husband voted for her? and, if so, what was his motive? He might have wanted to get her away from home. Come out, Stanton, and let the world know how you voted, and why?—N. A. Commercial.
