LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

THE REPUBLICAN BARBECUE.

The Executive Committee of 25, appointed to devise plans and carry them out for a grand rally at Sacramento in the interests of Garfield and Arthur, met at the office of Ed. F. Taylor at 4 P. M. yesterday, and was in session until 6 P. M.

The meeting was a very interesting one, and an earnest spirit was manifested throughout. George Cadwalader, president, and Mr. Snow acted as Secretary. All the matters relating to a grand barbecue were fully discussed, and finally this action was had. It was reported to the committee that Stanley Matthews, of Cincinnati, well-known statesman, and Governor Woodford, of New York, an orator noted for the highest order of eloquence, would be the collocation of the speakers, and that other distinguished orators would be present.

It was resolved that the Republicans of Sacramento give on Thursday, October 21st, a grand barbecue, to which should be invited the people of all the counties of Sacramento, Colusa, and Yuba, and the people of El Dorado, Placer, Yolo, Yuba, Sutter, Amador, San Joaquin, Solano, Colusa, Tehama, Eliza and Nevada, especially, and generally those of all other sections of the State. And it was after discussion, agreed that the barbecue should be carried out as nearly as possible on this line.

First—That arrangements be made to begin the rally and reunion at 10 A. M., with speaking from several stands at the same time, forenoon and afternoon, in open air if the weather is favorable, under the greatest covered inclosures at Agricultural Park if necessary.

Second—That a barbecue be held and plain provision of meat, bread and condiments be furnished, ample for all the thousands that may attend. The collocation of the speakers, and that all arrangements be made to be made to secure the attendance of Senator Blaine of Maine.

REPUBLICAN RALLY.

HON. HENRY EDGERTON RECEIVES AN OVERTON.

He Makes a Brilliant, Masterly and Grandly Eloquent Address.

The torchlight procession which preceded the Republican meeting last evening made a fine display, and was in every way a success. The procession in its line of march occupied a distance of three squares, and was charged with a fine body of men who are Republican voters, and not merely improvised torchlight bearers.

Next in line came the Republican Sailor Boys, Captain Sheehan commanding, who, in their campaign-stained uniforms, from last year's success, made good their part of the procession. Following the sailor boys were the citizens headed by members of the Board of Supervisors, and some in carriages.

The procession marched from the point of departure at the corner of Broadway and Front, when it counter-marched to Fourth, then to K, and halting in front of the Metropolitan Theater, where the torches were gathered from the commands, and the line then marched into the theater and remained in uniform during the meeting.

There has probably never been gathered in the Metropolitan Theater, in the thirty years of its history, a finer or more representative audience than that which greeted Henry Edgerton last night. The theater was dressed in flags and the stage set with handsome arrangements, and every eye was turned to the speaker's stand.

From the back of the stage to the furthest and uppermost wall of the gallery, every seat was occupied, and the audience remained there throughout the evening, with the most attentive and cheering attention, loud plaudits, cheers and enthusiastic applause, testified to the brilliant success of the speaker.

Mr. Hart then introduced to the audience the Republican candidate for President, Mr. Edgerton. When the applause had subsided that followed the introduction, he began to speak, and his acknowledgments and began his address. To give a synopsis of this address would be to give a synopsis of the full history of the Republican party, but the readers of the RECORD-UNION, just before the close of the evening, will find in the columns of this issue, which it did in a manner that was pronounced by the audience's applause as satisfactory.

According to its deserts and in the light of history, in the judgment of all honest men, and protesting only that it shall not be condemned because of the errors it has discovered in itself and itself corrected, or because of efficient delinquencies which it has exposed and punished. He called on the world to judge it by its results, and to declare its country.

Mr. Edgerton stated that he had intended to leave for Sacramento, but that the Chinese and other questions, but he found that this kind of speaking had led him to the conclusion that it was better to stay here. He then proceeded to review the facts and show that General Hancock had deliberately set about to thwart the expression of the people's will when the policy toward the South, which it had for over two years left to itself, and only extended over it the hand of martial law when the people of the solid South began to enact laws that were surely bringing the black man again into the enjoyment of his full and equal rights of every guaranteed right of Union citizens.
