A SIGNIFICANT DEMONSTRATION.

The way the New York business men turned out to hear Colonel Ingersoll's speech the other day indicates the profound feeling which exists throughout mercantile and financial circles at the East in regard to the issues of this campaign.

HANCOCK ON GETTYSBURG.

General Hancock has magnanimously stated that he was not the hero of Gettysburg. Considering that nobody would ever have thought of him in that capacity but for his nomination at Gettysburg, this concession is amazing.

PERHAPS.

Among the minor incidents of the campaign is a paragraph describing General Hancock's agreeable prattle about the prospects which have been sent to him by admirers since his nomination.

MR. EDGERTON'S ORATION.

Arrangements were made for the publication in this paper to-day of Henry Edgerton's oration on the issues of the day, and announcement accordingly made; but Mr. Edgerton was unexpectedly called away from the city in the week and has not been able to return in time to arrange the manuscript for the press, and hence its non-appearance.

RECALLING THE ISSUES.

In most hotly contested political campaigns it happens that towards the close the matters in controversy are almost lost sight of, and that so much passionate and irrelevant discussion is introduced as to confuse the situation, and leave all but the coolest and clearest-headed uncertain as to where they stand.

It is the more necessary to perform this service in the present case, because the campaign now drawing to its close has been peculiarly deficient in those strongly-marked issues and clear-cut dogmas which constitute such powerful aids to conviction, and tend to give enthusiasm and conviction to a contest.

It is in vain the Democrats have endeavored to obscure the issues by sensational frauds and reckless abuse of their opponents. Despite all their noise and all their wiles, men recur to the crucial consideration, and ask themselves what possible reasons can exist for making the change proposed.

workingman. When the premium on gold was ten, fifteen, twenty per cent., the paper dollar was really worth no more than 70, 55 or 80 cents.

No workingman can be said to understand his own interests who votes the Democratic ticket. The Democratic party has been the worst enemy Labor has had to contend with in this country.

mothers seem to think it very smart for "their children to use such words and to "have such manners." At another hotel Dr. Prime says he saw several tables occupied by children playing gambling games of cards, and that they evidently understood the game, and were as expert at them as grown people.

Colonel Bob Ingersoll, in alluding to the Morey forgery in his speech to the business men of New York, observed: "They appealed to the sword in 1860. Now they appeal to the pen." It was an incisive thrust, and the fact shows how far the Democratic party has fallen in morals since 1860.

We have before us a fac simile of the letter alleged to have been written by General Garfield to Morey. The evidence that it is a forgery sticks out all over it. A perfectly conclusive proof all the bad spelling to be found in it.

THE MOREY LETTER FORGERY. We have before us a fac simile of the letter alleged to have been written by General Garfield to Morey. The evidence that it is a forgery sticks out all over it.

SOLID SOUTH DOCTRINE. The Meriden (Miss.) Mercury thinks it useless to disguise its real sentiments any longer, evidently regarding the battle as lost. It rails venomously against the North, and urges its readers to "make no more cowardly concessions that secession."

DR. PRIME AND THE CHILDREN OF THE PERIOD. Dr. Prime has been venturing his disgust with the children of the period in the Observer, and truly the facts upon which he bases his strictures are somewhat strong.

profound contempt, and a heavier line of majorities for Garfield. Truly vice as well as virtue ought to be its own reward, for at least when it is committed by Democratic managers it is very apt to have no other.

AN INCISIVE SENTENCE. Colonel Bob Ingersoll, in alluding to the Morey forgery in his speech to the business men of New York, observed: "They appealed to the sword in 1860. Now they appeal to the pen."
