THE POPULAR JUDGMENT.

Again it has been intimated to the Democratic party that its politics are not acceptable to the country, and that it is not regarded as deserving of confidence.

We consider what its methods were, and reflect upon the cumulative folly and rashness of its positions, we can only wonder that there should ever have been any doubt as to the outcome.

For the Democrats had so arranged their plans that, in order to induce them, the people must have surrendered all pretensions to common sense, and therefore the contest was a one-sided party than the Democrats would be disposed to believe that this defeat would bring wisdom and prudence, but when we recall the past twenty years, we feel that we should not be justified in inferring the probability of any such change.

The Democracy has been defeated primarily because it deserved to be defeated, and deserved nothing else. It is not necessary to debate about for recalcitrant reasons. The case is plain and clear. The Democratic party made a thoroughly dishonest fight, on false principles, and with corrupt and foul methods, and it has been punished as every party which so degrades itself ought to be punished.

The Northern Democracy there is no sympathy at all demanded. The Southern Democracy, which in many respects is superior to its ally, will very probably realize the futility of any further reliance upon the solid South plan. That plan has had its precise effect predicted for it. It has made a solid North. Nothing else was to have been anticipated, and yet the Democrats thought that their Southern practices would pass unnoticed, and that the solid South would vote for them.

The result is a fresh proof of the actual inability of Democratic politicians of the present time to form an intelligent estimate of the tendency of public opinion. Whether it is because these persons associate only with men of like views, or whether it is because they have no other means of acquiring knowledge, we do not know, but through the national election returns of the last twenty years are pregnant with information and instruction for them, they appear never to realize that the devices they have already failed with so frequently are obsolete and exploded. In this instance they seemed to think that they were striking out a new line in trusting everything to abuse of the Republican candidate.

One of their own brightest men, Alexander Stephens, of Georgia, told them plainly that if they adopted that method they would elect Garfield, but they would not listen to any such warnings, and as they proceeded threw off even common decency. How fatal their blunder was they now have leisure to realize, and how grave a charge they are committing in the charge of the campaign to make the blame fall on the Republican candidate.

All his ideas were vent and base, and his supposed brilliant inventions were precisely those which did his party the most harm. The lessons of this election are plentiful, and they must be taken to heart by the Democrats if the latter expect ever to win a victory as established as follows: There must be no organized interference with the freedom of the franchise, as in the solid South. There must be no repudiation of principles, as in the case of the currency and the tariff. The denunciations of civilized life must be respected. Calumny, slander, fraud, forgery, and wholesale lying must be abandoned as campaign weapons.

Parties must make it plain that they not only have principles, but that they have convictions. The time for putting soldiers in the Presidency has passed. Henceforth only trained civilians must be elevated to that office. Covert hostility to the legislation of the war period must be abandoned. Covert movements for the presentation of Southern claims must be abandoned. All these questions may be said to have been adjudicated by the popular judgment in its final and its most solemn and just. If this last and most severe repulse teaches the Democratic leaders that honesty is the best policy it will be worth all it costs them. They could not have done their country more harm than in winning a victory by the methods they had adopted in this campaign. If they retain any lingering sentiment of patriotism, they will come to realize this presently. The country, however, has been saved from a very great danger, and in such a way as to put that danger far off for the future. The evil experiments in politics have culminated, and the vote given them is rather an expression of good-natured contempt than anything else. They are entitled to be remembered as the peculiar people who imagined it possible to obtain a currency better than the best, and who chose the literally worst as specially adapted to their purpose. All their notions were equally top-sid and fantastic, indeed, and it is some satisfaction to know that the breed is small and rapidly diminishing, because any proof of their increase would tend to confirm the theory that as civilization advances the liability towards insanity becomes greater.

THE NEED OF ELECTORAL REFORM.

Every Presidential election brings into prominence the clumsy and unsatisfactory nature of the machinery by which we choose our chief magistrate. The obsolescence and unreliability of the electoral college has been so fully and frequently demonstrated that it would seem more useless a reformation to recur to the subject did not our politicians show themselves deaf to the popular demand for reform in the present system. The whole matter of electing the popular vote for President and Vice-President needs to be reorganized, and on such a basis that majorities may tell as they should, and not, as now, be absolutely wasted. Here for example comes Iowa, with a plurality of some 80,000 for Garfield, and it does him no more good in the end than a majority of 1,000 would. Here then are 79,000 people practically disfranchised, for that is what it amounts to, and the same remark of course applies to every State where the majorities are large. The truth is that the present system is irrational, stupid, in direct opposition to the fundamental principles of republican government, and, in fact, operates as though it had been expressly conceived to interfere with and thwart the free expression of the people's will. The only philosophical scheme for such a purpose is possible such a complication as four years ago, and would make the election of President the genuine result of public opinion.

The Emperor William is troubled with swelling of the head after dinner. The sovereign over here are frequently troubled with the same complaint, but they don't care to have it paraded in the papers.

THE REPUBLICAN ELECTORS RECEIVE A HANDSOME MAJORITY.

The Republican Electors received a handsome majority. The vote of the city of San Francisco was 19,014; Hancock, 21,478; Hayes, 442; Congressmen—Davis (Rep.), 10,439; Rosecrans (Dem.), 20,900; Maybell (Greenback), 605.

PAGE RETURNED TO CONGRESS.

Probable Election of Berry, Rosecrans and Leach. The vote of the city of San Francisco was 19,014; Hancock, 21,478; Hayes, 442; Congressmen—Davis (Rep.), 10,439; Rosecrans (Dem.), 20,900; Maybell (Greenback), 605.

RECAPITULATION.

The RECORD-UNION yesterday presented a recapitulation of the vote in 842 precincts in California. This morning it adds the total then found for the following additional showings:

Table with columns: Precinct Name, Total, Rep., Dem., Greenback, etc. Includes precincts like San Francisco, San Diego, San Jose, etc.

THE MOREY LETTER ONCE MORE.

It is once more in order to inquire what effect the Morey letter forged had upon the Presidential election. It is important to ascertain this as far as possible, because if it should appear that the forgery had an appreciable result, it might be adopted as the chief arm of the secretaries of the party.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Queen Victoria is 61. Vigorous efforts at tobacco culture are being made in Italy. In one county in Florida the number of colored people who can read and write is in excess of the number of whites who are equally educated.

The peach orchard of John H. Parnell in Troop county, Georgia, is said to be the largest in the world. It covers two hundred and fifty acres of land.

"Where does your grain go to?" "Into the hopper." "What hopper?" "Grashopper," triumphantly shouted a scholar.

Sign upon the gateway of a French province: "Beware of the French Government, to study the geography of the Republic, as well as its civil and military organization."

"What are your politics?" the chaplain of the Iowa Penitentiary asked an intelligent-looking convict. "I have not come out for any body yet," replied the convict, gazing placidly through the bars.

The same of laziness has been convicted by the man who always kept one eye closed because he could see well enough with the other, and he could not see so much trouble to keep them both open.
