A PRACTICAL COMMENTARY ON "MACHINE" METHODS.

The star mail route scandal is not a new one, but though it has been ventilated fully long ago, and though despite desperate and continued attempts to suppress and to whitewash it, the ugly facts of the situation keep coming to the surface, it does not seem to be generally realized that it is a most significant illustration of the practical tendencies of "machine" rule.

The Postal Department under President Hayes remained under the old political management. No attempt was made during his administration to introduce in any of the reforms to which the President stood pledged. It continued to be a favorite battle ground for the schemers. Congress found it a most useful auxiliary to their personal ambition. It was made an asylum for political hacks of all kinds. No business-like rules or regulations were observed in the appointment of its officers.

At Liverpool, where it is quoted at 99 1/2 for 100, the market is quiet. In the San Francisco stock market yesterday twelve of the twenty-four leading stocks on the Consolidated list sold at slightly lower prices than on Monday, and twelve sold at slightly lower prices. The variations were all under the dollar mark, and most of them less than 50c per share.

The ship Sumatra, from New York, is expected to arrive at San Francisco on Monday. It is reported to have a cargo of 10,000 tons of goods. The ship is owned by the Sumatra Steamship Co., and is commanded by Captain J. B. Dwyer.

The dispatch of 12,000 convicts through Moscow, Russia, for Siberia, is the latest item. The Albanian insurrection has been completely defeated at Ipek by Turkish forces. The breakers on the Grand Trunk Railroad in Canada are to strike to-night at 12 o'clock.

President Garfield disappointed the reform element in the country by what he said concerning civil service reform in his letter of acceptance and his inaugural address. It was apprehended that he had no strong convictions on the subject, and that he would make no serious fight for it, though some particularly sanguine people imagined that he might have intended to avoid the shocking example of all reformers and statesmen who are at all sincerely afraid of promising more than they can perform.

There was a slight sparring match between Senators Farley and Dawes over the Chinese treaties. The former said the Republicans would be held responsible for the delay in ratifying these treaties, and Dawes retorted that the Democrats had done nothing with them when they had a majority in the Senate. Both Senators were partly right. The truth no doubt is that neither the Republicans nor Democrats of the Eastern States care two straws about the Chinese treaties, and that consequently both parties have neglected them almost equally.

The flow of immigration from Europe is this year stronger than ever. A great and general agitation is evidently breaking up the masses in England, Germany, Ireland and the Scandinavian countries, and they are pouring across the ocean in constantly increasing numbers. The present immigration, however, appears to be of a peculiarly healthy kind. It is not one of paupers and broken down people, but of families possessing means. In its purely economic aspects there can be no doubt that it is matter for congratulation. The great stream represents enormous new capital, new industrial energy, new productive power. There is still ample room on the continent for all who may come, and all who come must contribute to the building up of the country and the prosperity of the republic.

GENERAL NEWS.

Washington, May 13.—The final agreement of the Republican caucus to provide for the immediate ratification of all the treaties of the late President Hayes is practically an abandonment of the long-contested struggle for the election of a Republican President. The caucus adjourned at 10 o'clock this morning, and the next two or three weeks at the furthest. The first special importance to the Pacific coast will undoubtedly be the ratification of the Chinese treaties, which may come before the Senate as early as to-morrow or Thursday, as the caucus, in deference to the earnest representations of Senator Miller, has arranged that the Senate shall go into session immediately after assembling to-morrow, and that the Chinese treaties shall be the first matter to be considered.
