The Scandal at Albany.

CHICAGO, July 1st.—A Times' special from Albany says: On Thursday afternoon a well-built lady, appearing to be a teacher or some other sinecure from New England, with eye-glass and veil, came to the Delavan House and was assigned to room 113. According to the story told by the half-breeds to her confidants, she was attracted to the room by a notice pinned to the door. In a confidential manner she asked the boy if Conkling had room 122 which is on the floor overhead. This roused the suspicion of Woodin, one of the half-breed leaders. Those let several into the secret, and it was resolved to set a watch on Platt and the woman, who gave the name of Mrs. Baldwin, but from what place it has not been ascertained. Platt was seen to go to room 113, and it was resolved to set a watch on Platt and the woman, who gave the name of Mrs. Baldwin, but from what place it has not been ascertained.
