THE GRAIN GAMBLING PROSPECT.

The other day grain gambling was formally inaugurated at the San Francisco Stock Exchange, and the President of that institution made a speech on the occasion, in which occurred the following suggestive remarks: "We all remember how long it took before the business of the Stock Exchange grew until they had sold the Comstock and over again a dozen or so of other mines in a year. And it will be the same with the Grain Exchange. It may not come at once, but the time will come when we shall sell the entire crop of the State many times over."

Truly, these are encouraging words, and it is indeed a noble prospect to which the President of the Stock Exchange thus points. He holds out the hope that at no distant period the rage for gambling which has made the institution over which he presides a curse to the State, will include the grain crop as well as the mines, and that the sharps who, producing nothing themselves, but wasting continually, are more mischievous than the Chinese, will luxuriate in a new "market" of a kind more useful, and, as we shall see, more completely the demoralization of the stock market has prevailed business circles in San Francisco.

The few feeble attempts which have been made to justify the grain gambling enterprise have only served to demonstrate the absence of all legitimate grounds for it. The absurdity of the undertaking from a business point of view was admitted by the President of the Stock Exchange, who declared that the only possible outcome of the transaction would be to "sell the entire crop many times over." Out of such a business nothing can or indeed expected to issue but fat pickings for brokers and capitalist speculators. These persons count upon making their profits out of the ignorance and inexperience of the general public. They are not worthy of the position that the proprietors of far games, in fact, they are non-producers. They add nothing to the wealth of the community. They live by fleecing their neighbors. Their whole energies are devoted to diverting the earnings of the producers from legitimate channels to their own pockets. They are parasites and leeches upon the body politic.

Their game is altogether a harmful and bad. The pretense that their betting stimulates commerce is utterly false. They are not wanted in commerce at all, but occupy there a position as illegitimate as that of buccaniers. They have as a class done infinite mischief to the people of the Pacific coast, and they cannot point to a single really valuable result as the work of their hands.

The Stock Exchange has for years made the rich richer and the poor poorer. It has been an open drain in which three-fourths of the surplus earnings of thousands of industrious and hard-working men and women have been sunk. Where it has brought wealth to one it has brought ruin upon a thousand. It has been a little ground of rich and poor, and the rich have been able to keep it in the palm of their hand. It has covered up and protected the most colossal and shameless frauds in the administration of mining property. It has served as a machinery for swindling on a grand scale. It has repeatedly paralyzed industry, put a stop to improvements, prevented the establishment of manufacturing, and its tendencies have been inimical to the State. It has operated as a constant temptation to the weak and foolish. It has led men to suicide and women to shame. It has developed the most sordid, knavish, brutal qualities among the men who have been devoted to it. It has been the cause of robbering brothers, of fathers ruining sons, of intimate friends turning enemies, of one man cheating another, of the breaking up of homes, of treachery and fraud and even murder.

It has often been remarked that California did not advance nearly so fast as many other States possessing fewer resources. A potential cause of this slow progress has been the gambling system which has prevailed in this State, and, unfortunately, millions of dollars which ought to have been invested in manufactures, in industries, in agriculture, or in legitimate commerce, have been sucked into the maw of the insatiable Stock Exchange, only to be employed thereforward in gambling. All that can be said for the business is that it encouraged lavish expenditures for a time. The few dealers in luxuries prospered during the heyday of the Comstock; but the thousands whose money paid their bills went ill-clad. It no doubt produced a meretricious glitter and glare, such as characterized Paris during the corrupt days of the Second Empire, but it did not benefit the State, nor even San Francisco.

And now we are asked to jubilate over the inauguration of a new gambling enterprise, in which grain is to take the place of mining stocks. We decline to do so. We see in the Grain Exchange project nothing but an attempt to renew the old plundering programme which filled California and Pine streets with unscrupulous adventurers, and impoverished the public who dealt in stocks. The product will, they are sure, keep away from the new Exchange. They have nothing to gain by gambling in grain. They are no match for the keen and well-trained professional gamblers who are undertaking the business. These gamblers are kites, and they are on the look-out for pigeons. If the farmers of California are anxious to be plucked, we have a change. The genius of the gambling committee should be equal to introducing variety. For instance, it has been suggested that the money be spent for literary exercises, free amusements for the people and novel entertainments for all. But there are a host of ways of celebrating without traveling far from the old port. People are tiring of Grand Marshals, ovations and triumphal cars, the extortion of bands, the mimicry of "Hobbes," etc.

The Grain Valley and Nevada City people are congratulating themselves over the fact that they are about to enjoy the advantages of a tight train to connect with the San Francisco Exchange and the Stockton Mail and second our motion. Certainly new ways can be devised. Let us have a change. The genius of the gambling committee should be equal to introducing variety. For instance, it has been suggested that the money be spent for literary exercises, free amusements for the people and novel entertainments for all. But there are a host of ways of celebrating without traveling far from the old port. People are tiring of Grand Marshals, ovations and triumphal cars, the extortion of bands, the mimicry of "Hobbes," etc.

The American morning shows signs of running mad. Just as soon as he heard of Bradburn's trouble in the English Parliament he went for the country and lectured. Bradburn declined with a promise that was most refreshing in this day, when everybody who breathes a little quicker than his neighbor is rushed upon the lecture platform.

Dr. Bion thus pertinently put it in his recent paper on the requisites of good health: "A person enjoys perfect health when pure air to breathe, Nature has so adjusted the human body that, unless less than pure air at the time, will properly purify the blood and insure the best health and longest life."

There was a fashionable wedding at St. Leon, Ore., the other day, and among the guests were three or four Christian Scientists. They were in a humble knowledge in the clouds were it only you dare to look at them.
