(SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE RECORD—CON.)

WASHINGTON, July 7.—Secretary Teller has rendered an important decision, reversing the opinion of the Commissioner of the Mineral Office in the matter of a protest of the mill-site claimants against the issue of a patent to the town-site claimants of Rio Colorado.

In his decision the Secretary says that in the provisions of the statute under which the mill-site application is made, there can be no mill-site unless there is a lode or vein to which it may attach.

The remainder of the afternoon was occupied in a discussion on an amendment carrying questions of practicability, constitutionality and advisability.

Without action, the Senate went into an executive session and soon after adjourned.

House of Representatives—Another Dispute.

WASHINGTON, July 7.—The House went into Committee of the Whole on the sundry civil appropriation bill, the debate to close at 2 o'clock.

Both words of Ohio made a speech in reply to Bayne's criticism of the present Administration. The Executive, he said, needed no champion.

His friend from Pennsylvania (Bayne), in the exuberance of his desire to criticize the Administration, had commenced by lauding, and very properly, the late President of the United States.

Standing by the tomb of one, "the deep damnation of whose taking off" impressed every one, criticized and pursued on one hand by men who might be supposed to be on the other by men who hoped he would attempt to achieve success by dubious means, the present Executive had walked forward in the confidence of his high office in a manner which ought to command the admiration of right-thinking men everywhere.

Applying the same standard to the Republican Party, neither Bayne nor the direction by those who would have him impute to their personal opinions, nor moved by the interests of the party, he seemed to regard him as one who snatched the scepter from his grasp, he had conducted himself patriotically in the honest and sincere discharge of the duties of his office.

The people would judge of the course of the Administration as it left its impress upon the country's history, rather than by the decree in which it sought to interfere with the public or private ambition of any man or any set of men.

Bayne passed on to the question of removals and appointments, and incidentally eulogized the administration of President Hayes. It was the freedom of that Administration from corruption that he had in mind.

(SPECIAL DISPATCHES TO THE RECORD—CON.)

House of Commons.

LONDON, July 7.—In the House of Commons this afternoon British the debate on the report of the repression bill, Gladstone said the Government had taken measures unknown to Parliament to operate against secret societies.

An amendment offered by Trevelyan, Chief Secretary for Ireland, to limit the right of search to the daytime, except in cases of secret societies, was strongly opposed by the Conservatives and others.

Gladstone declared that if the amendment was rejected he would have to consider his personal position.

The amendment was rejected—207 to 104. Previous to the vote John Bright said if the amendment was rejected the people throughout Ireland would feel that at any moment their homes could be invaded.
