IMPROVEMENT IN STEAM-WINDING WATCHES.

Now made on a different plan from what has been customary, the improved watch possessing, it is thought, some special advantages. Thus, when it is desired to set the hands, the stem is first drawn out, which causes a collar on the end of it to bear upon a stud in the shorter arm of a two-armed curved lever. This depresses the long arm of the latter, which turns a yoke and disengages the gearing from the mainspring arbor, connecting an independent wheel with the hand-setting teeth, by which motion is imparted by turning the stem. As soon as pulling on the stem ceases, the yoke is thrown back to its place by a spring. Normally, another wheel, which makes gear with the hand-setting wheel, is in the position of the mainspring, and is thus always ready for winding by pressing down upon and winding the stem. This arrangement is simple.—Boston Herald.

LETTER FROM THE KINGDOM OF HAWAII.

About a Foolish King—An Odd Bill—A Bold Claim—Native Schools The Chinese.

(Correspondence of the Record-Union.) HONOLULU, H. I., July 31, 1882.

It was hoped that last week would bring to an end the vertiginous harlequinade in the Government building called Hali Iolani, but which has grown to be better known as the "Mad House." The manner in which money figures were handled from the moment the appropriation bill appeared for consideration by our legislators indicated their entire ignorance of values, which is perhaps not to be wondered at when we remember that they are little better than a poor lot of heathens, unqualified to care for themselves much less for those more fortunately born in the fabled island of civilization; but it was felt that the amounts appropriated for sugar, plums, popguns, wooden swords, flags, fire-crackers and the glittering baubles so fascinating to the savage, were placed at the highest possible notch. Last week's final reading of the bill dispelled this delusion. Instead of simply passing upon the several items, each was debated in most disorderly manner, as though in pandemoniac committee of the whole, and almost killed, the civil list being especially and cruelly mangled.

THE FREE LIQUOR BILL.

Had been passed, and Kalakaua had evidently renewed his promise to sign it in consideration of their fulfilling their part of the contract in doing so handsomely by him. By way of showing him that there was nothing about them but the "other people's" money, they were in a haste to defend in all of law, rules of order, decency and common-sense to vote him fabulous sums for jewelry, soldiers' clothes, fireworks, feathers, brass buttons, tin-ware, and other articles, which are known after Hawaiian ideas of an improved kindergarten. Reference having been made to Kalakaua's receiving a larger income than the President of the United States, the bill was passed, and the President of the United States received not only $25,000 a year, but has access also to a privy purse of $3,000,000, which he could draw upon and spend at pleasure without Congressional interference. Some one had been stuffing the poor fellow—perhaps Kalakaua himself. The $2,000,000 loan bill, which has been passed, is justified by the Cabinet on the ground that it is necessary to be expended on immigration for repopulation, agricultural instruction, sanitation of Honolulu, and public improvements; but all that is necessary, or likely to be accomplished, is that the revenue had not been already appropriated to enable Kalakaua to make a greater fool of himself than nature's first intention. The draft of a $10,000,000 Congressional literary effort deserving immortality. The intention was to float the loan upon the English market through a London syndicate, which had hidden about twenty cents on the dollar, and was a speculation. The $2,000,000 thus embezzled, which could be loaned by Kalakaua to Tom, Dick and Harry on promissory notes, etc., which Kalakaua understood to mean that they would be repaid from the Hawaiian treasury, wanted by putting the money in the hands of a slip of paper. With what avidity an American Indian, or a San Francisco sand-lotter would jump at a like opportunity. Kalakaua is of the same breed. Seeing the prospect of a $10,000,000 loan, the Cabinet killed it in committee, so Kalakaua was obliged to abandon this little plum. The unblushing effrontery of that half-breed heathen is hardly credible. With an assurance worthy of his uncle Arthur, grandfather, he comes before the Supreme Court demanding a large and

VALUABLE ESTATE.

On the ground that his grandfather, Aikana-ka, and not the woman's husband, was father to the deceased, to whom the estate belonged. Kalakaua claims that, on one occasion, the chiefs and people being engaged in cutting sandal-wood in the mountains north of Honolulu, his grandfather, who had been deceased's mother, the issued the order, "On a-ki-ka-ka, the woman, 'sleeping on the ground,' from the circumstance of their sleeping on the ground during the sandal-wood cutting time. From this it might be supposed natives seldom sleep on the ground, but in fact they sleep any where else. It is also claimed, as tokens of acknowledgment that the child was his, Aikana-ka, gave the woman his malo (loincloth), two lai pa (hair combs), and an a-ki-ka-ka (hair-duster), which presumably his grandfather, who had been deceased's mother, and certain tokens deposited either then or at the birth, they would mean no more than an indication that he believed he was the child's father, and that Aikana-ka had had intercourse with her husband, and there could be no certainty that Aikana-ka was really the father. Therefore the Court ruled that Mo-ohono was not the legitimate son of Aikana-ka, and that the woman's estate, entitled to inherit the estate. Our Government schools have been holding their closing exercises, consisting of oral examinations. Highly edifying entertainment was afforded.

AT MATINEE SCHOOLS.

In which English is taught. An old Record-Union correspondent (Mark Twain) described in a letter how natives used to attend church clad in native articles of wearing apparel, such as a coat, vest, shirt, and trousers, or a glee over the legs, etc. The fashion has changed since then. Now a suit of summer clothing is frequently supplemented by another that an Arctic explorer might covet, and encasing the pedicel extremities, the leather seems to be a species of torture the Kanaka cannot endure, and only afflicts himself in that way upon rare and extraordinary occasions. School children are ships of the old block, and to see how the chips sometimes flow heels up in attempting to cross the smooth floor was electrifying, and all because they had more unwisely shoe-leather than they were capable of controlling, while their minds were distracted by the gaudy raiment of some indulgent relatives or friends of more generous proportions than themselves. The one- was also mangled, and the natives, to get rid of nothing of the warm springs gushing from every pore, and insidiously undermining happy and stock-up-pollars, frills, starched gowns, etc. For instance, when asked to sing the Hawaiian hymn, "Among, among, among." A bidding legislator being asked to express in other words a sentence beginning with "do," said, "dear babies" (girls), and an explanation said that "do" was a female deer. When singing-time came, and the whole school burst forth in a song to the air of "The King of the Cannibal Islands," the climax was capped, it being with difficulty the members of the royal family present could keep their seats. Kalakaua has not much nerve or nerve, but the little he has responds very unpleasantly to that air.
