WHY IS IT THAT Longton's "People's Market," on J street, between Sixth and Seventh (south side), is attracting so much attention? Because it is as complete as any market in California. The poultry, fruits, vegetables, fish, Eastern groceries and other choice stuff kept there are always fresh and inviting. It will pay to stop and take a look—especially if you are in the city, as they will see Sacramento can do in the way of a complete market.

WHOMVER desires to purchase clothes made to order, and save money, should by all means call upon Salsburg, The Tailor, on the north side of J street, between Third and Fourth, in this city. Their stock of goods is very large, and they have out down their prices to lower than ready-made clothing. They guarantee their work and trimming to be first class, and the most perfect it is always given, or no sale.

HOTEL, RESTAURANT AND SALOON-KEEPERS will do well to attend the final closing-out sale of crockery and glassware on Saturday, November 11th, at Ackerman's, 629 J street. Job lots will be offered at such prices as will compel you to buy. Goods sold for cash only.

YOUR LAST CHANCE!—The final closing-out sale of crockery and glassware takes place at Ackerman's, 629 J street, on Saturday, November 11th, and continues for one week. Unheard of bargains will be offered!

HOTEL, RESTAURANT AND SALOON-KEEPERS! Do not fail to attend the final closing-out sale of crockery and glassware, at Ackerman's, on Saturday, November 11th. Bargains are in store for you.

FASHION LETTER.

TO

Weinstock & Lubin.

FROM THEIR NEW YORK SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

MODJESKA, SALVINI, NILSSON, MRS. LANGTRY, CAPOUL AND MISS THURSBY.

IS THERE NOT DANGER OF A PLETHORA OF ENTERTAINMENT FOR AMERICANS THE COMING WINTER?—CLOAK-MAKERS MORE THAN ORDINARILY BUSY—THE ENGLISH WALKING JACKET, THE REFINED, THE LINGER, THE RAGLAN—MAY MODIFICATIONS OF THE DOLMAN-MANNER OF CUTTING, MATERIALS, TRIMMINGS, SEALS, SKIN THE PREVAILING FUR.

New York, November 4, 1882.

Following closely upon the heels of Modjeska, Salvini, Nilsson and Mrs. Langtry, Patti is expected ere long; and Capoul returned to us; and our own Miss Thurbury—our pride and our pleasure—always delightful, and never disappointing—what a plethora of entertainment is before us for the winter. After passing the conventional (or better, the unconventional) ordeal of the interviewers, Modjeska has been biographical in one of our leading weekly newspapers; and now certain of the "stars" mentioned are receiving attention from those delegates of the press, who do more or less toward manufacturing public opinion, as concerning the merits or demerits of those fortunate or unfortunate individuals, who depend for happiness or success upon public patronage. Professionally, the reputation of each of the "stars" noticed, save that of Mrs. Langtry, is an accepted fact; it yet remains for play-goers to decide whether, without her reputation for beauty, Mrs. Langtry has or has not claimed to be regarded as an artist in the profession she has adopted. And already, to American eyes, her physical attractions are regarded with question. The truth is, we are more accustomed to beauty in women in America than are Europeans; and the fair "Jersey Lily" need hardly be surprised if criticism here, by comparison, be not so favorable and as flattering as the wholesale praise of her in London would warrant her to expect. However, we shall see; while your correspondent heartily wishes her an abundant increase to her stock of histrionic laurels at least. In the meantime dressmakers, milliners and cloak-makers are busy in devising "something to wear" for the fairer portion of the audience destined to grace places of amusement; and with the chill that has pervaded the air for the last two weeks, the burden of interest rests on wraps. We can hardly imagine how the weather is with you; but here, already, furs are considered, and our merchants are doing large business in heavy cloaks.
