

THURSDAY, MAY 6, 1886.

NEWS OF THE MORNING.

FORGOTTEN.—The Burmese insurgents have burned 4,000 houses in Mandalay. The Nihilists are again showing alarming activity in Russia. Silver in London, 45 1/2; consols, 100 1/2; 4 1/2, 114.

EASTERN.—Huguenin's Tyrant won the mile and a quarter dash at Lexington, Ky. A falling bullet buried fourteen workmen in Minneapolis, Minn., killing several of them. A stepdaughter of Jerome Bonaparte has taken the black veil in Baltimore. Ex-Vice-President David Davis is alarmingly ill at Bloomington, Ill.

WASHINGTON.—The Postoffice appropriation bill has been passed in the House. It is thought the House will adjourn the first week in July. D. W. Bartlett has been reappointed American Secretary of the Chinese Legation. Brigadier General Paul (retired) is dying from a stroke of paralysis.

THE SOCIALIST'S WORK. Governor Stanford puts the knife of logic to the heart of the laborer who declares that the man who labors has labor to sell, and must be left to that liberty of contract which is the safeguard of an inalienable and inalienable right. Destroy security in property and you paralyze the arm of industry, for men will not, as the Governor well says, "endeavor to produce what they can no longer enjoy."

THE CALM IRRIGATION QUESTION. That the irrigation question will give color to the approaching legislative campaign is now certain. What is needed, therefore, is calm deliberation, and total absence of heat. The Supreme Court of the State has given the interpretation of the laws regarding water rights as they stand. The one question is, "To what extent shall the State go in modifying these laws?"

There is compensation to come out of all this turmoil about hours of labor, wages of labor, arbitration, strikes, lockouts and labor organization—the whole people will become enlightened upon laws and unalterable principles of political economy, to which the wisdom of the country, no effort to adapt the laws to this condition, is not to be entertained. There will be irrigation legislation, and to its formulation it is needed that there be brought the best judgment. The demand emphasizes, therefore, the necessity of choosing members for the next Legislature with special care. We ought to send up the best and most rational thought of the State to that body. We do not, and never have favored cast-iron pledges on the part of legislators. They are very likely to prove obstacles to wise legislation. What is needed is to send up fearless men and free men. The people are far more likely to get good laws from such than from representatives pledged on the stump to specific action. There is to be adopted a permanent State policy for irrigation interests. It will be the outcome of the highest wisdom to pass into the law to be harmonized, and probably some of them will go to the wall. We may as well make up our minds now, as later, to the fact that an irrigation system will be adopted for California that will give the broadest use of the flowing waters of the State to agriculture, that is possible to be attained, at the least possible injury to rights acquired under the law as it stands. All public influence, therefore, should be directed to securing calm counsels. There is no need for hot blood, nor yet for the meddling of the mere politicians. The question will be settled, as all great ones are where personal interests conflict, by concessions, and by a full recognition of rights and a fair wise adjustment of the same. The riparianists and appropriators have nothing to gain by hot contention or the employment of chicanery. Sober counsel, a clearly-defined irrigation policy resulting, and vigorous execution, will put this State in a progressive march that will lead it, in ten years' time, to such achievements as are now scarcely foreseen by the most daring friends of irrigation.

WHAT MAY BE. The Poles and Bohemians and other foreigners of the laboring element who are creating the disturbance in the West, are adding fuel to the kindling flame which will lead to free institutions which will give these outcasts as much freedom as the rest of mankind. It is a rigid restriction upon all objectionable immigration. We now exclude the foreign criminal and the prostitute; why should we not exclude the Anarchists? The men who put the blood-red flag of the Socialists above that of the United States. What business have men here who cannot abide by our laws and adhere to our free institutions, to claim the protection of this country? It begins to look as if the chief privilege of the American citizen is to vote, serve on juries and bear arms against riotous foreigners. The alien cannot be compelled to take up the musket; he cannot be drawn to serve upon juries; but he is able to possess property, to make a noise in public affairs, to incite to rebellion and to create the necessity for the native-born and naturalized citizens who are law-abiding and orderly, arming and being shot to death in order to teach these refugees from European monarchies that liberty is not license, nor free government the loose rein of passion. It may be that these aliens will awake some day to a realization of the fact that they do not own and cannot "run" the country. They will possibly find themselves face to face with an array of indignant American citizens, native born and adopted, who will teach the world a second time that law is supreme in this Union and that the Government is not at the mercy of rioting rebels.

WHEN the so-called "immediate delivery" system was introduced into the Postal Department the RECORD-UNION expressed its entire want of faith in the scheme, and gave it but a few months of life. The reasons for this belief were stated clearly, and now the system is on its last legs, and its decadence is attributed to precisely the cause this journal suggested would operate to kill it. The letters delivered are growing less in number each month. In November last 86,125 went out; in February the number declined to 65,150. The system is dying, because, in the first place, it is not "immediate delivery." Except in the largest offices, the letter calling for delivery does not go out for a very considerable time after it is deposited. In offices where there is but one night carrier, it often happens that he is absent for an hour delivering a letter, and in the mean time all others wait. Then if the letter comes in before midnight it must be delivered, and this causes a great many pieces to be roused up at late hours unnecessarily, and the result has been to make the system very unpopular on that account. Then, again, the carriers cannot deliver except at the address written, while a district or telephone messenger can search out the party to be reached. The system is not so speedy nor so certain as that of the private messenger company. To secure the benefit of the immediate delivery system one must carry his letter to the Postoffice. If it is very important, the street boy will not serve his purpose. If it will, however, the letter will reach its destination by ordinary carriers pretty nearly as quickly as by the immediate delivery system. The people have not taken kindly to the new idea, and now that it is no longer a new thing, it is, in its present form, declining to its death, which we anticipate will presently be reported. It is possible that it may be retained in large cities for the purpose of specially delivering letters from other points, that are sent bearing the special stamp, but for any other purpose it is not likely to endure.

There is compensation to come out of all this turmoil about hours of labor, wages of labor, arbitration, strikes, lockouts and labor organization—the whole people will become enlightened upon laws and unalterable principles of political economy, to which the wisdom of the country, no effort to adapt the laws to this condition, is not to be entertained. There will be irrigation legislation, and to its formulation it is needed that there be brought the best judgment. The demand emphasizes, therefore, the necessity of choosing members for the next Legislature with special care. We ought to send up the best and most rational thought of the State to that body. We do not, and never have favored cast-iron pledges on the part of legislators. They are very likely to prove obstacles to wise legislation. What is needed is to send up fearless men and free men. The people are far more likely to get good laws from such than from representatives pledged on the stump to specific action. There is to be adopted a permanent State policy for irrigation interests. It will be the outcome of the highest wisdom to pass into the law to be harmonized, and probably some of them will go to the wall. We may as well make up our minds now, as later, to the fact that an irrigation system will be adopted for California that will give the broadest use of the flowing waters of the State to agriculture, that is possible to be attained, at the least possible injury to rights acquired under the law as it stands. THE success of the sale of stock in New York from the Stanford Palo Alto farm in this State, is gratifying to all Californians. We are teaching the East that California is so far from stock-raising a greater mine of wealth than the Blue Grass region of Kentucky. Only the best methods to realize what immensurable possibilities reside in the peculiar adaptability of our climate for the raising of the stock. If the industry has the attention here in the next ten years, that present interest promises, the fame of California horses and cattle will be world-wide, and our stock interests will be a source of revenue and prosperity now hardly to be measured by active fancy.

In the bloody shirt is waved in the next campaign let it not be forgotten that the resurrected Confederates of the once rebellious South this time first unfurled the gray standard to the breeze of political agitation, and Jeff Davis himself stood by the halcyons.

A writer on Corea says: "From birth to her seventh year woman enjoys her freedom; at 7 years of age she is shut up." It is rumored that a syndicate of married men will send a delegate to Corea to find out how this can possibly be done.—(New Haven News.)
