PREPARING FOR MORE BOMB-THROWING.

Of what sort of timber is society composed in Chicago? It is but a few weeks ago that a bomb thrown in Russia at despotism, passed over the seas and continents and struck Liberty in Chicago. Over the dead and mangled bodies of her policemen, that city rose in her might and swore in her wrath that such things should never again take place. The people realized at last that the same murderous sentiment that would aim a bomb at a Car, would cast it at the free institutions, with a short fuse burning. The bomb in the hand of the Anarchist is against all order, all regulation, all possession, all property, all family relations, all decency, all things except lawlessness, lawlessness and murder. But here in June, on the 14th day, and while yet the widows and orphans of the Anarchist bomb sit with undried eyes, Chicago permits these cranks, murderers, outcasts and enemies of society, to "picnic" within her borders, and there to preach loudly the same old doctrine, and advise to the same old practice, and generally to indulge in all manner of rant tending to incite men to violence, murder, robbery and the upturning of orderly government. Yet in this same city, not four weeks ago, a Judge charged a Grand Jury that such proceedings as this was in violation of existing law, and could and should be prevented, whereas all Chicago applauded. Extract from one of the speeches delivered at the "picnic." It was made by an enthusiastic rant named Verplanck imported for the occasion:

What is law? Law is the code of tyranny. What are the police? They are the executioners of the law. They are the architects, Gods how call in Chicago's heroic deeds on the night of May 4th. Would that you had been better prepared and that your engines of destruction had been more numerous. But that night, next time which is swiftly coming—we will tear the liver from the throat of the Anarchist and hurl their barred and cuffed children to the dust.

And this by an unbalanced ruffian named Murdock from St. Louis:

I smash my teeth with unavailing rage when I think of the brave and noble heroes penned in this prison of Chicago. Their names are enemies, their strain is desperate and their hatreds face me. I feel that I must resist this ill will by contemptible deeds. But our day of reckoning will come, and the tyrants and all must meet their double-edged, fire-breathing scowls. We will get it, too, if liberty ever claims her own.

Now Carter Harrison is Mayor of Chicago. He was very brave with words on the occasion of the Haymarket massacre. He had not admitted that this Democratic warrior had not used in earnest and was going forth to do battle with law and order. He knew this picnic was to take place. He knew—it was his duty to have known—just what the gathering was for, but he did nothing except to withdraw all the police from the vicinity and to give the bandits a free field. This action is inconceivable until one reflects that there is to be an election in Chicago presently, and the Democratic party, of which Carter Harrison is chief cook in Cook county, needs votes badly, and every other Anarchist at least has a vote or controls one. It is simply amazing that the people of Chicago will endure this sort of thing. For six years, under Carter Harrison and his stripe of administration, they were compelled to submit to the undisturbed assemblies of the Lake front. He never lifted his hand as Mayor or otherwise to check them until the Haymarket massacre, and then he dared not to remain silent—it would have been as much as his life was worth to have failed of duty at that time. It is possible that Liberty is to be spit upon at these Sunday Chicago out-throat picnics with impunity, that political crabs may secure votes?

THEY ARE TO GO.

It was the apparent scheme of the Ministry that the French Princes should go. The Senate votes to exile them. The Ministry, not, indeed, original responsibility, but the scheme, for the fact is that the extremists in the Assembly pushed the policy upon the Cabinet, and it lacked the courage to reject it. We know from all prior expression that the Premier is an opponent of the scheme of expulsion, yet he is a party now to its proposal, as is the Ministry. Now that the Senate adopts the measure the Government becomes as extremely radical in one direction as the Monarchists are in the other. It boldly navigates a policy opposed to the spirit of republicanism, and one calculated to make some of its test friends doubt the cohesive ability of the republic. No Government can afford to confess that it fears an enemy. It may despise and reject an enemy; it may limit the preaching of anarchism and forbid treasonable utterances, and even shut the national door in the face of one seeking to enkindle discontent. But to exile the heirs to a kingly and

SHORTHAND REPORTERS.
How They Aid Criminals to Escape Punishment.

(San Francisco Post, June 22.)
H. G. Wells, who committed perjury in the Sharon case, after confessing his perjury by swearing that his first statement was false, has escaped punishment for his infamous crime by the criminal assistance of a not unskillful villain—of an employee of the Police Court. This young man, whose name is O'Connor, is the shorthand reporter of the Police Court, took down the deposition of Senator William Sharon on the original investigation, after Judge Sullivan had ordered the arrest of Wells for his palpable perjury. In transcribing his notes for use in the trial, he either accidentally or deliberately wrote Alex. D. Sharon, instead of William Sharon. As the affiant, Sharon's deposition was of vital importance, and when District Attorney Wilson found the error in the deposition, he sent for O'Connor, to see if it could be corrected in some way. O'Connor first said he had lost his notes, and later found the notes, and said that he had written down the name of Alex. D. Sharon, instead of William Sharon. The District Attorney explained the matter to Judge Wilson, and offered to produce any quantity of oral evidence to prove that the name of Alex. D. Sharon was the deponent, and that the deposition was taken in the Court. But the Judge after examining the law decided that the depositions could not be amended by oral evidence, and that being dead there was no way to remedy the willful or accidental mistake of shorthand reporter O'Connor, who was sworn to report what he saw, because a shorthand reporter willfully or accidentally changed the initials W. into A. D., a man guilty of a most infamous crime goes free and cannot be punished for his offense. This appears to be the case, and if Judge Wilson had decided to amend the deposition he would have been reversed by the Supreme Court.

A lawyer connected with the District Attorney's office, speaking of the case, said: "This is one of the many evil results of the jobs forced through the Legislature to find a place for a lot of shorthand reporters. The administration is the mercy of irresponsible men. The District Attorney is forced to take the transcript of the evidence and the record as it is given by the Police Court to try the case on in the upper Court, and the slightest fault in the record will set the criminal free. Time and again we have had cases dismissed by Judge Tully and other Judges on the ground that the record was faulty. There has been scandal about the appointment of Court reporters and scandal in their blunders, but what can we do? We have no power to dismiss them, no power to correct their errors, and are often blamed for the consequences."

A fearful accident occurred on Big Bar bridge, which crosses the Mokelumne river on the road between Jackson and this place, last Saturday afternoon. A Chinaman who had been driving a team of mules and a wagon from Stockton here and intermediate places for several years, and known as Chinaman, was driving a team of mules and a wagon to Jackson to a Chin celebration, and when he had driven about half way across the bridge the team, consisting of a mule and a horse, stopped suddenly and immediately began to back, and striking the railing on the side of the bridge, the horse and mule were crushed pell-mell to the bowlders in the bed of the river. He did not wish to get into the boat, but when he finally did he said he mistook the lights on Alcatraz for the city lights and swam towards them.
