LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Guilty of Vagrancy.

The case of the People against Kate Dawson occupied most of the day in the Police Court yesterday. The complaint charged her with vagrancy, and the attorneys for the defense answered by a plea of not guilty, and the court set her for a prior arraignment of the same charge, a plea of not guilty and the plea that she had been placed in jeopardy twice for the same offense.

On the 23d of last month she was arrested as a vagrant, and in the complaint charged as being a common drunkard. She was brought before Judge Buckley for trial, and her counsel stated that she was ready to proceed to the county jail. City Attorney Hart made a motion to dismiss the case, on the ground that the material witness, Chief Dillman, had been called and said that he could not convict her of the charge for want of evidence, whereby the case was dismissed.

The case yesterday was a retrial on the charge of vagrancy, made by Chief Dillman. W. A. Henry, Gett & Anderson, attorneys for Kate, tried to have the case dismissed on the grounds of a prior arrest and acquittal of the same charge. They introduced the records of the Court for the purpose of showing that Kate had been arrested and acquitted, and the order of the Court made by Judge Buckley overruled the motion, on the ground that the complaint in the former case simply charged her as being a "common drunkard," while in the case at hand she was charged as being a "vagrant" only, and the charge of drunkenness was not necessary a charge of vagrancy.

The witnesses for the people were M. M. Lowell, Jas. Coffey, Jack Williams, E. Frank, C. A. Rowland and others. Most of them testified that they had seen her in houses of ill-fame and in the company of "crooks," "ex-convicts" and "gangs" at most all hours of the day and night, and that they never saw her doing any work whereby she was trying to support herself.

The witnesses for the defense were W. B. Burtis, who testified as to the records of the Court in the former case, John Dawson, father of Kate, who stated that Kate had a home with him as long as she wished to stay there, and that he was perfectly able to take care of her. He did not know whether she had been at home all the time within the past three weeks or not, as she would often come in and go into her room without his knowing it. He had on two occasions asked Chief Dillman to put her up and bring her home, but the Chief failed each time. Mary Dawson, the mother of Kate, testified that she never ordered Dillman to arrest her daughter, but that she did want him to arrest her. Her testimony was relative to the loss of three postal notes, which she alleges she purchased at the Sacramento Postoffice and included in a letter to Mrs. Armstrong of San Francisco. They were of the following denominations: $3.53, $3.53 and $3.54, amounting to $10.60 and were to pay arrears in a lodge of which she was a member. Her story is that she gave the money to the Cash Commissioner, H. B. Becking, to purchase the postal notes for her. That he did so, and she mailed them as above stated. Not receiving the notes, she wrote a letter of inquiry to the Secretary of the lodge, and was informed by the latter that the money had not been received. She commenced an inquiry, but so far has been unable to find any trace of them.

General Carey suggested that inasmuch as Mr. Leake had testified that the stultus showed that no such postal notes had been issued either in the month of May or April, and as she stated they were issued on or about the 12th of April, there must have been a mistake about the date. Mr. Becking had purchased notes of Wells, Fargo & Co.

Witnesses, however, was quite confident that they were postal notes, although she had not critically examined them. She did not think she was mistaken about the matter. Her testimony was quite lengthy and tedious, and was at last interrupted by the Court, who said:

"I have heard enough of this kind of testimony. If the counsel for the prosecution will not object to it, I will stop it myself. What has all this got to do with the guilt or innocence of the defendant? It has heard enough of this kind of testimony, and will hear no more of it."

General Carey's honor for several reasons I have made up my mind to allow the defense the widest range, and shall introduce the same in an ante-room to investigate this office and its officials to their hearts content.

The Court then threw this responsibility upon the Court. The defense has admitted that the accused took a package of letters from the office and placed them in an ante-room. You are wasting much valuable time in discussing lodgings and other matters outside of the case, and I will have to order a halt.

Mrs. Kropper was excused from giving further testimony.

The next witness called for the defense was John A. Sheehan, of Sacramento. He said he was the editorial writer of the Evening Bee.

Attorney for the defense: "Mr. Sheehan, do you know the general reputation of Mr. Leake for truth, honor and veracity in the community in which he resides?"

"I don't know," he replied.

"From what you know of Mr. Leake would you believe him to be an honest man?"

"I should have to know my answer to that under oath. If he had any interest in the case I would not."

"Editorial writer of the Bee?"

"Did you read the articles which appeared in the Bee?"

"I think I wrote one of those articles."

"You have very strong personal feelings against Mr. Leake for truth, honor and veracity?"

"I have personal feelings against him, but not strong feelings toward him so strong that he would go out of my way to do him an injury."

"I entertain no strong personal feelings against him. I don't think I would go out of my way to do him an injury."

"Would you enjoy writing him up in the case?"

"If he did a wrong and I should find out I would write him up in the paper. What I wrote about him is true."

"Did you go to the Postoffice and make inquiry to satisfy yourself of the correctness of these statements before publishing them?"

"I lost money through the Postoffice, and I satisfied myself these statements were true."

"Now, Mr. Sheehan, you have asserted under oath that you know the reputation of Mr. Leake in the community in which he resides; that it is bad, and that you would not believe him under oath, which is a very serious charge. Upon what do you base this assertion?"

THE POSTOFFICE CASE.

SOME CONFLICTING AND SENSATIONAL TESTIMONY.

In Their Efforts to Break Down the Testimony of Witnesses the Defendant is Lost Sight Of.

The Record-Union's report of the Kennedy case in the District Court at San Francisco yesterday, before Judge Hoffman, closed with the testimony of J. W. Stafford, clerk, for a few moments, was Money Order Clerk in the Sacramento Postoffice. The next witness called was John S. Williams, a deputy clerk of the Supreme Court. When he took the stand one of the attorneys for the defense asked:

"Do you know W. S. Leake, the prosecuting witness in this case?"

"I do, sir."

"Do you know his reputation, where he lives, for truth, honor and veracity?"

"I do, sir."

"Knowing his reputation, would you believe him under oath?"

"I would not believe Mr. Leake under oath."

The attorney, turning to General Carey, the prosecuting attorney, with a triumphant wave of the hand, said: "Take the witness."

General Carey—"Mr. Williams, I believe you are a deputy under Mr. McCarty, the late defaulting Supreme Court Clerk?"

"I believe that Mr. Leake preferred charges against Mr. McCarty, and upon that ground he was indicted for embezzling public funds."

"Yes, sir, and he also preferred charges against me, but the legislative investigation vindicated me."

"Then I am to understand that you would not believe Mr. Leake under oath simply because he had the moral courage to charge his employer with this shortage?"

"I think Mr. Dunn preferred the charges."

"Have you heard Mr. Leake's character discussed by others?"

"I have not."

"Is this simply a personal opinion of yours, based upon your own knowledge, and not upon common report?"

"You did not entertain this opinion prior to the time those charges were made against him, did you?"

"No, sir. Not until the charges were made."

"You now, I am to understand, swear that you do not know Mr. Leake's reputation for truth and veracity in the community in which he resides?"

"I do not. That is only my personal opinion of the man."

General Carey now turned around and looked smilingly at defendant's attorney, as he asked him to ask the witness like this one true out.

The defendant's attorney arose and, in such humility, said: "Your Honor, I feel it incumbent upon me at this time to ask that all of the testimony of this witness be stricken out. The Court granted the request. Mr. Williams was excused from giving further testimony and retired."

The next witness was Mrs. M. E. Kropper, of Washington, Colo. county. Her testimony was relative to the loss of three postal notes, which she alleges she purchased at the Sacramento Postoffice and included in a letter to Mrs. Armstrong of San Francisco. They were of the following denominations: $3.53, $3.53 and $3.54, amounting to $10.60 and were to pay arrears in a lodge of which she was a member. It is no longer a question of doubt—about the contrary was one believed—that medicines which produce violent effects are unsuited to other than desperate emergencies. In other words, that superior remedies are calculated to weaken and injure the system rather than reform its irregularities. Among medicines of debilitating effect are cathartics and cholera remedies which contain arsenic, strychnine, the bowels. Because it does not do this, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is preferred to the ordinary class of purgatives. Its effect is to cleanse the system, to reform its character in chronic constipation. It relieves by invigorating the intestines, and infuses the system with a healthy vigor, and imposes upon them by nature. Promoting the secretion of bile in normal quantities and its normal action, it cleanses the liver, it is eminently conducive to digestion, and contributes in no small degree to keep the bowels regular.
