W. S. LILLY, who confesses that he knows very little about American journalism, in the course of an essay in the Forum for July, says:

I wonder how many newspaper writers ever so much as care that they are morally responsible for what they write.

We can concede to Mr. Lilly that there are a great many people owning and running newspapers, and others writing upon them, who do not at all concern themselves about their moral responsibility.

It is mistaken if he thinks that the ethics of American journalism justify less conscientious regard for duty in the public forum, on the part of a newspaper proprietor or writer, than his obligations in private life and his self-respect dictate.

The majority of writers on the press not only do not want to mislead, but are solicitous to be esteemed reliable in all the statements they send to the reading public in print.

It is not to the common sense of the proposition that reputation for justness, reliability and accuracy underlies genuine success.

Prof. William H. Howell, of Johns Hopkins University, has inquired into the method of executing criminals in New York by electricity, and pronounces it as certain as any other means outside of the bullet.

The complaint of the matter in response to the complaint of electric light companies, which are very desirous that the scheme should fail.

It was said by these corporations that they had testimony at command to prove that full discharges of currents as strong as that to be used in New York had been received by men without resulting in death.

One instance was given of a line-repairer in Omaha, who was paralyzed by such a shock, but recovered, though he sustained the application of the current accidentally for twenty seconds.

In that case he had, by mistake, taken a wire in his other hand came in contact with a wire of the electric light system of the city.

We then said that the case was not a parallel one, for the application involved the resistance of the arms and body, and it was not made directly to the nerve centers.

That this is the correct conclusion is the opinion of Professor Howell, who says that in all such cases the wire held in the hand is to some extent insulated, and the current is not applied to the vital spot with undiminished vigor.

In case of execution, however, a metallic helmet fits over the head, and the current is directed immediately to the medulla, and is not distributed through the body; therefore death paralysis of the nerve centers is instantaneous and positive.

The New York papers are agitating the proposition for a World's fair in that city in 1892. The excuse made is that it will be the fourth centenary of the discovery of America by Columbus.

There would be nothing suggested or done that in any way detract from or conflict with the exposition of the "Three Americas" at Washington city.

There was a time when the advice "Go to Texas" was construed as an insult. Times and epithets have changed. The advice is now taken in earnest and Texas with her 5,000,000 acres of rich soil, her vast expanse of territory, her business push and enterprise, echoes the old phrase with simple this change, "Come to Texas."

California needs to be just as energetic, just as inviting, just as generous and just as persistent in her invitation.

HELD ON SUSPICION.

Joseph Cline Arrested for a Crime Committed in Yolo County.

On the 4th of June of last year the little town of Winters, Yolo county, was the scene of a most brutal assault committed by two men upon a young lady named Lizzie Waughel, of that place.

The young lady afterward married, and for some months past nothing has been heard of the crime. According to the Woodland Mail of yesterday, however, a couple of arrests were recently made in this city, and one of the parties is strongly suspected of being guilty.

The Mail says that about a week ago a private detective of this city showed a man suspected of some petty crime. He became acquainted with the suspect, and in the course of a day or two started to hear the man commence to talk of the Winters crime. It was evident the man knew what he was talking about, and was arrested, and on Thursday last was placed in the Yolo county jail.
