

GRAND ISLAND.

IT IS NOW ENCLOSED WITH IMPREGNABLE LEAVES. The richest lands of the County in a Fair Way of Being Permanently Reclaimed.

An examination of the new levee work which is being done on Grand Island, on the lower Sacramento river, shows that along the old river, from Kercheval's place at the head of the island to the cross levee at the lower end, the work is practically finished, and in a very substantial manner.

The last trunks are being put on the levee along Parvin's, Figg's and Hart Smith's ranches. The levee at the wing-dam below Walnut Grove is a good one, and well-thrown back at places where there is a possibility of the bank washing.

The old levees, generally speaking, were sufficient to keep out any high water of the past fifteen or twenty years before the new work of this year was added, yet all the land-owners cheerfully raised their levees to the newly-established grade, in order to be in uniformity with the immense levee which is being constructed along the lower four or five miles of Steamboat slough and also the cross levee being built by Mr. Ferris.

This is where the heaviest work is required, as all know, by bitter experience, and it is not difficult to see that the work at this point is being done with a view to its being permanent, and that it is more substantial than the usual contractor-work.

While it would be desirable that the levee should be built in a regular, straight line, yet all the heavier parts, as, for instance, the base, were there cuts and excavations, are finished in all the exposed places; and although the work is not yet done to one unfamiliar with levee building, it will not take long to finish the levee.

The highest and lowest temperatures yesterday were 90° and 52°, while for the same time last year they were 87° and 57°. The highest and lowest temperatures one year ago to-day were 86° and 57°.

The barometer last evening, was on the rise, and with southerly winds and stormy weather. The temperature in the East yesterday was 60° and 30° below zero, and in the West 50° and 30° below zero.

From below the levee, the foot of the island, or the cross levee—some three miles—the heavy basework is done as above stated, and six weeks of dredging and horses will suffice to put on the upper work. A force will then be kept at work during the winter putting on the finishing touches, smoothing the top, and making it as perfect as Mr. Ferris puts it, "making it look pretty," but which does not help to keep out the water to any great extent.

There will be no pumping done this winter, but next year it is expected that first-class pumps will be put in, capable of handling the water in a regular, steady and safe manner.

Many tracts of land have already been rented, on from three years to five years, on good terms to the owners, and altogether the prospects were never brighter for the residents of the island than the present time. It is certain that Mr. Ferris is putting up a first-class levee, even better than required by the Trustees. He has large landed interests on the island, which perhaps partly accounts for this, and in addition, he is a gentleman who is very jealous of his reputation, and who is a first-class builder, whose reputation seems to be well deserved.

IT CAN BE DONE. The Vagrancy Act upheld in the Case of Kitty Crowley.

The long-drawn-out case of Kitty Crowley, charged with being a vagrant, was concluded yesterday in the Police Court. The defendant is an average specimen of the woman that occupy barges in the vicinity of Second and J streets. She had been frequently charged with robbing her customers, and the police authorities sought to get rid of her by advising her to leave the city. She knew they could not drive her out, and she had no other notion that they could not convict her under the Vagrancy Act, so she, to use a sporting phrase, "took to the water."

The woman secured good legal counsel to defend her, and the prosecution was also strengthened by the fact that she was not a difficult matter to prove guilty, and under the circumstances, Judge Buckley yesterday decided that a case had been made out against the woman. At the request of her counsel sentence was postponed until next Monday, and it is possible that if she will plead guilty, the city her sentence may not be enforced.

If Kitty Crowley is a vagrant, there are scores of other vagrants inhabiting the same part of the city, both male and female, and the police can find plenty of work in arresting and prosecuting them as vigorously as they can. The city is generally better off without them, and if they are outlaws they have no business here.

Kitty Crowley was found guilty because it was shown that she lived "in and about houses of ill-fame." There are squads of spittle-legged, red-headed, and other male opium fiends and thieves about the streets who are generally supposed to have their habitations with these women in just such houses. Why they get rid of them, now that the wheels of justice have been set going so smoothly?

out to Oak Park. He testified that the men were engaged in a wordy quarrel most of the way out. Coy told Plant he had heard the latter had killed his wife, and Plant said he would go to the car and get the gun. They got off the car at the end of the road, and a man named Smith was called by Coy and asked if he had a gun. Smith said he had one, and Coy said he would go to the car and get the gun. Coy then struck Plant once or twice, when the latter put his hand behind his back as if to draw a weapon, whereupon Coy struck him on the head with his cane. The men then separated, but were separated.

This was the last testimony taken. Both sides said they were willing to submit the case to the evidence without argument, which was done. Justice Henry said he wanted to look over the evidence as taken by the official reporter, and would give his decision at one o'clock this afternoon.

DIVISION WANTED. Suit on Behalf of Heirs to Set Aside a Deed to a Lot.

S. G. Martin, administrator of the estate of W. H. Sutcliffe, deceased, has commenced suit against Annie Banquier for the recovery of the estate of title to the south half of the west quarter of lot five in the block between K and L, Sixth and Seventh streets.

Plaintiff claims that deceased was of unsound mind and feeble intelligence for some time prior to his death, which occurred in December, 1888, and that the defendant (his daughter) exercised undue influence over him, to the extent of securing from him a deed to the property in question two days before his death; that the other two children of deceased had been kept in ignorance of his condition until deceased had carried her point.

The plaintiff prays that the deed said property may be adjudged to be a fraud upon the said estate, that the same may be set aside and declared void, and that the plaintiff recover the costs of suit and such other relief as may be justly granted.

HERE AND THERE. Soft and Balmey Weather Here, and Freezing Beyond the Rockies.

The signal service reports, as made by Observer Barwick, show that .18 of an inch of rain was precipitated up to 5 o'clock last night, making .84 of an inch for this month and this season, against .55 of an inch to an equal date last year.

The highest and lowest temperatures yesterday were 90° and 52°, while for the same time last year they were 87° and 57°. The highest and lowest temperatures one year ago to-day were 86° and 57°.

WAS IT MURDER?

A PLAUSIBLE THEORY OF THE CAUSE OF COOPER'S DEATH. Assailed by Chinese on the Day Before He Died—Something That Defies Inquiry.

Coroner Clark yesterday held an inquest on the body of Roderick Dhu Cooper, who was found dead in his bed on Tuesday night, which was done. Justice Henry said he wanted to look over the evidence as taken by the official reporter, and would give his decision at one o'clock this afternoon.

Owing to the fact that Cooper had been drinking hard for some days prior to his death, the public generally accepted the theory that his death resulted from alcoholism, but there were not a few—especially among those who were familiar with his habits, and who knew him to be a young man of unusually robust constitution—who were loth to believe that his death resulted from the effects of drink.

One saloon-keeper, who has been familiar with Cooper's habits, told a Record-Union reporter on Wednesday that, while he had no other relief as to the condition of deceased's stomach, and while he did not believe that the results were due to alcoholism, for he had seldom known Cooper to drink liquor, his customary beverage being beer. Still, there was no other apparent cause of death, and the theory that Cooper's over-indulgence in drink was responsible for his sudden taking off was accepted generally.

But there have been later developments that throw a different light on the subject, and it may yet be developed that the unfortunate young man owed his death to violence. It seems that on the evening of the day preceding that of his death Cooper was assailed by some Chinamen in the alley between Second and Third, and J streets, and received a severe beating with one of the hickory poles used by the Chinese for carrying baskets. He was not only beaten on the head, but on the face, and his nose was broken, and he was severely and repeatedly jabbed in the stomach with the end of the pole. Cooper was somewhat under the influence of drink at the time, and was accompanied by one Tom Cunningham, who was too drunk to be of any assistance to him.

It is a well-known fact that a severe blow or punch in the region of the stomach is often attended with fatal results, and a heavy blow on the head, especially when the victim is under the influence of drink, is a very dangerous implement of warfare, especially when used in that manner on a half-drunken man, and will be distributed at once to all the County Clerks in the Sacramento district.

stormy dramatic situations, and deals with the better emotions and the tenderest and purest sympathies. Tonight "The Danites" will be played, originally credited to the authorship of Joaquin Miller, but unproperly so. One of its authors was Mr. Rankin, who has recently written a number of plays. It is a California novel-drama, with strong comedy lines and situations, and deals with the adventures of a man named Sandy Moore. Mr. Rankin may be said to have created a part that has come to be recognized as an original and one of the best examples of drama types who have lived in the early days of the conquest of the West. The matinee announcement for to-morrow has been cancelled, and instead of "Canuck," "The Runaway Wife," will be played Saturday night.

At the Clunie Opera House Monday and Tuesday next Henry I. Chanfrau, who comes of a distinguished dramatic family, will appear in the American drama, "Kit, the Arkansas Traveler." He will be supported by Miss Ethel Brandon and the Alcazar Theatre Company of San Francisco. The piece will be produced with special effects and properties. The matinee will be on Saturday and the evening on Sunday and Monday.

The recent engagement of Chanfrau to Miss Brandon has been very successful, and the "Chronicle," speaking of "Kit," said: "The piece has done a good second week's business at the Alcazar, and the audience have thoroughly enjoyed it. Chanfrau's Kit and Cooper's Mabel Bond are two different but equally strongly drawn Western characters, and the many exciting scenes in which they take part are deeply interesting. Seldom, if ever, has a stronger cast been seen in a melodrama of the 'Kit' class."
