

HOW LADIES MAY PRESERVE THEIR HEALTH AND BEAUTY.

From the New York Tribune. "Oh, I'm exclaiming with this shopping," exclaimed a well-dressed woman as she dropped into a seat in a restaurant that caters to the tastes of shoppers. "What shall we order?" she added to her companion. "I'm too tired to eat anything heavy, let's have a chocolate, a chocolate and some soda-water. I must eat something, or I shall look forty when Charlie meets us at the matinee."

her way and bumped up against a frame house. She had no more than touched it before an old dandy ratched his head up through a hole in the roof where the chimney once came out and yelled at the Captain on the boat: "What de hell is you gwine wid dat boat? Can't you see nuffin? Fust thing yer knows yer gwine to turn dis honcer, spill de old woman an' de child'en in de flood an' drown 'em. What yer damn out here in de country wid yer dain boat, anyhow? Go on back yonder fro de co'nfield and get back into de ribber whar yer 'longs. Ain't no business set'n' niles out in de country folla'n rou'n' people's houses now!" And she backed out.—Nashville American.

IF THAT LADY at the lecture the other night only knew how nicely Halls Hair Restorer would remove dandruff and improve the hair she would buy a bottle.

It is reported that petroleum has been discovered at Middleboro, England, and experimental borings are being made to the depth of 2,000 feet.

No one ever tried Simmons Regulator without being satisfied with its effect.

There is a great deal of talk about the value of milk taken in this way. I am sure there would not be so much beer-drinking among them. There are thousands of hard-working scrubwomen, women of the most energetic and even show girls in this city who drink beer with their meals because it gives a little stimulant to their tired bodies, and don't understand that it is only like applying a whip to a weary horse instead of giving him rest. If they only knew they would find in this simple draught as much real strength as in a barrel of beer.

In fact, hot food generally is coming more and more into favor among sensible women who are wide awake as to the effect on their beauty of good health. Loss and indigestion go hand in hand, cold drinks and dyspepsia lie down together, and warm bouillon is getting to be as common as tea at receptions, at homes and 5 o'clock teas."

The devil came up to the earth one day, and he called on the man in gray. For a quiet ten minutes chat. The name of that friend I had conceived. And do it more or less with a smile. That it really doesn't matter.

They'd really hot—I'm inclined to think that whisky's the best of the particular drink. And then they're drinking. A scheme for the further attack on man—A diabolical intrigue which will ruin the world.

Which the devil was meditating. "I want to invent," said the fiend with a smile, "a weapon that's cowardly, fierce and vile. For man and beast alike, and to play with more deadly, more brutal, more cruel, more cunning, than anything else in existence. Than dynamite, dagger, infernal machine, or anything Christians say with."

"I want to improve on the poisoned shaft. On the hellish weapon that has been craft. On Europe's most skilled inventors. It must beat the bullet, outlast the knife. It wounds must not be felt, it kills; Is there anything you can mention?"

The friend went straight to his desk and took a weapon that lay by his blotting-book. And held it aloft. "Here," said the fiend. "Here's the deadliest weapon that wouldness men. Can't you improve on a poisoned pen?"

"I can't," said the fiend. "I don't mean trying."

He took his hat and he said "good-by." As he thought of the man in gray, Who makes a gift that the gods might own. The deadliest weapon that wouldness men. And stabs at both man and woman.

Ambergris. The word ambergris is French, and signifies gray amber; but by whom or when applied to this marine phenomenon we have not been able to discover.

The scientific explanation of the nature of ambergris is that it is the product of some disease in the sperm whale, and is found sometimes in the intestines of the creature, but more frequently is found, after expulsion, floating on the surface of tropical seas. It floats in masses, which have a speckled gray appearance, and mixed with which are generally found some remnants of the known food of whales.

The best quality of ambergris is soft and waxy, but it is said not to be uniform in color. The most valuable is that which is found in the Maldives and other parts of the Indian Ocean, or a portion of the coast of South America, and sometimes floating on the Atlantic Ocean.

The essential characteristics of ambergris is its powerful and peculiar odor. It is so peculiar, that art has never been able to imitate it, although the scarcity and enormous price of ambergris has lent every stimulus to invention. It is so powerful and diffusive that the very minutest quantity is perceptible in the most fragrant perfumes.

The chief compound of ambergris is a fatty matter called ambrein, which is obtained by boiling in alcohol. This ambrein—and there is said to be about 80 percent of it in the best ambergris—is what gives it its value, for it is in this ingredient that the perfume lies.

There is another peculiarity ascribed to ambergris, and that is its power to exalt the flavor and perfume of other substances with which it is brought into combination. Thus, a grain or two rubbed down with sugar is often added to a hoghead of wine, giving a perceptible and, what is considered some, an improved flavor to the whole. And a small particle of ambergris added to other perfumes is found to exalt the odor of the blend.

In fact, ambergris is too dear to use alone, and it is so dear that it is one of the most adulterated articles known to chemists. It is adulterated both by those who export it and in the countries in which it is used.—Chamber's Journal.
