

TAKING THE CENSUS.

Census Enumerator to Miss Elder—"What is your age?" Miss Elder—"I was born in '70." Census Enumerator—"1870 or 1871?"

"Is it taking the census yet call it?" said Mrs. McInerney to the enumerator. "Taking the nonenses is what it is, ain't it?"—"Washington Post."

Census Enumerator—"Madame, how old are you?" Madame (sarcastically)—"Eighteen." Census Enumerator—"How long have you been married?"

Madame (cilly)—"Twenty-eight years." Commercial Gazette.

Census Enumerator—"Well, I have finished a big day's work, and I'm tired. My wife—I'm so sorry I can't help you. Now sit down, dear, and let me tell you how you have been married?"

Madame (cilly)—"Twenty-eight years." Commercial Gazette.

I discovered one of the census enumerators at work in a leading up-town hotel yesterday. He was inquiring at the office the name of every guest in the house on the previous night, whether transient or regular boarder. The names of transients, he explained to me, would be transmitted to the Supervisor in the district where the guest lives permanently, so that there would be a certainty that he would not be missed by being away from home. I heard during the day numerous funny stories of answers given to enumerators. A well-known spectator, when the defecting question was put to him, responded: "Just mark me down as crazy, with the remark that I got caught on the wrong side of Chicago gas last week."

A dinky wreny and foot-come census taker rang the door-bell of a house on Fortieth street last yesterday afternoon.

"I am tired, I am not used to walking," he said to the man who opened the door. "I am taking the census of this part of the city and will have to trouble you for a chair to sit in while I ask you the questions. Thank you. Your name please?"

"Sforzini's Bruttkefizing." "What?" "Sforzini's Bruttkefizing." "Have you a large family?" "Fifteen of us altogether."

The census taker turned pale, looked at his watch, closed the book, got up, put on his hat, went slowly down and out, boarded the first street car going northward, and wrote out his resignation as soon as he got home.

"I am a man not easily discouraged, Caroline," he said to his wife, "but I've concluded there is no money in taking the census at two cents a family."—Chicago Tribune.

VERY OLD PEOPLE.

Erastus Lovette is Now One Hundred and Over.

Calvin Tompkins died at his home in Tomkins Co., N. Y., May 18th, aged 97 years. He began life as Captain of a packet boat, then became brickmaker and dealer in lime as a fertilizer, and then founded a plaster of paris and Rosendale cement business. He served in the army during the war of 1812, and only fifteen years ago established a lime business at the place he named Tomkins Co. in the Hudson, which is still flourishing.

A Rome (Bradford county, Pa.) correspondent of the Philadelphia Press writes: Erastus Lovette, of this place, was born in Connecticut, December 28, 1786, consequently he is in his 104th year, and from his appearance he may stay with us many years to come. If you could see him start off on a visit to this city, or perhaps to Chicago ten miles to town on foot with a blue cotton umbrella strapped across his back, you would think him to be about 50 years of age instead of 100. His hair is gray, but there is plenty of it, and his teeth are good. He has a reputation of being the oldest man in the city, and he is the oldest man in the city of 1812. His time is spent in smoking and chewing tobacco and talking with those who call upon him. He has never been married.

Signing for the Farm.

Signer Bob Taylor, of Tennessee, talking to Chattanooga, says: "When a mere boy on the farm on the banks of the Watanga river I used to stam an hour occasionally to sit under the sycamore trees and dream of the future. I thought that if I could get off the farm and into the city and be a lawyer my cup of happiness would be full. I went to the city, learned a few legal phrases, and my ambitions were to go into politics. My people sent me to Congress, where I sat for two years with the great men of the country. My name was then to be Governor of Tennessee, the greatest State of the Union, and I thought my happiness would be complete. For two terms the people of Tennessee honored me with the position of chief executive. My ambitions have all been realized. I have mingled with the great and rich men of the country, and I have been on a high pinnacle in politics, but I say to you, after a careful review of the past, I sigh to rest me again under the shadow of the old sycamore tree on the banks of the Watanga, and live again the life of the farmer boy. There alone is perfect peace, joy and contentment. I have no political ambitions to satisfy—my greatest desire is to get on a good farm, with my wife and children, and there pass the closing years of my life."

Pawnbroker's Prices.

A citizen of Brooklyn told an Eagle reporter that he picked up lots of good things in the pawnshops, although he has acquired a shady reputation among his friends by doing so. He says: "I have my own opinion of people who are seen going in or out of the shadow of the three balls. He says: 'I make it a rule never to pay more than half what a pawnbroker asks, for he always asks twice as much as he expects to get, and sometimes I did so for even less than half. I once saw a handsomely carved pipe in a pawnbroker's window and went in to price it. Twenty-two dollars was the sum demanded. I said 'good morning' and went away. A few days afterwards I was passing the place I thought of the pipe and went in again to ask the price. The old fellow remembered me and offered the pipe for $21. I said 'good morning' again and went out. Every time that I found myself in the neighborhood I dropped in to ask the price of the pipe, and every time I did so it came down $1 in value. At last I said: 'I will give you $5 for it.' The pawnbroker handed it over with the remark: 'Dake it. It's worth more, so help me, but I'm tired of seeing you come in here.' So I took it."

At Ofen, Hungary, a woman has died who had not for thirty years gone outside of her house. She was the daughter of well-to-do parents. Thirty years ago she was about to be married. Her lover, "to test her obedience and love," desired her on a certain fast day not to go into the streets. She agreed, and broke her promise and went into the town. The next day her lover broke the engagement, and thereupon she made a vow that she would never again during her life time would she leave her house—and she kept her word.

An Ohio lady was so frightened by a snake that her glossy black hair turned white as snow, and she returned to its original color by Hall's Hair Renewer.

QUEEN VICTORIA.

What She Drinks, and Why the Court Physician Recommended it.

The London World has been making an investigation of what the Queen drinks, and has ascertained definitely that upon the advice of Sir William Jenner, she drinks whisky diluted in water. This is for the purpose of retaining her vigor, renewing her strength and prolonging her life. The whisky which she drinks is obtained from the distillery on her own Balmoral estate, and of course is perfectly pure. Thus the World offers a valuable suggestion in this fact: England's sovereign drinks whisky in water. The World offers a valuable suggestion in this fact: England's sovereign drinks whisky in water.
